3 NEW MINISTERS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a major reorganization of his cabinet today, appointing three new ministers, shuffling others and creating a new board of economic development ministers. The new board will be composed of 11 ministries, headed by President of the Board of Economic Development Ministers Robert Andras, formerly president of the treasury board.

New faces in the cabinet include Pierre de Bane (Matane) named minister of supply and services and John Reid, 41, (Kenora-Rainy-River) named minister of federal-provincial relations.

Martin O'Connell, 52, (Scarborough-East), was named labor minister, a post he held briefly in 1972 before being defeated in that year's general election. He was re-elected in 1974.

Andre Ouellet has been named minister of public works. He will remain as Urban Affairs Minister until the department is disbanded at the end of next March.

In addition, he will retain responsibility for Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the National Capital Commission, which oversees government holdings in the Ottawa area.

The urban affairs ministry is being dropped to save money and to limit federal activity in areas that overlap with the provinces.

Marc Lalonde, formerly minister of federal-provincial relations, was named minister of justice.

Alastair Gillespie retains the energy portfolio and takes charge of science and technology.

Senator Joe Guay, who held the revenue portfolio, was dropped from the cabinet as was Jean-Pierre Goyer, the former supply and services minister, who has said he will not run in the general election expected in the spring.

Otto Lang, who has been acting justice minister since the summer resignation of Ron Basford, keeps his portfolios of transport and the wheat board.

Senior ministers who kept their portfolios in the shuffle were Don Jamieson in external affairs, Jean Chretien in finance, Allan MacEachen as deputy prime minister and president of the privy council, Hugh Faulkner in northern affairs, Eugene Whelan in agriculture, Bud Cullen in manpower, Romeo LeBlanc in fisheries and Barney Danson in defence.

Statistics Clobber $

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar plunged nearly half a cent against its U.S. counterpart in early trading on money markets today following news that Canada's merchandise trade surplus fell sharply in October.

The dollar opened at 84.88 U.S. cents, down 45-100 of a cent from Thursday's close of 85.33 U.S. cents. It was the first drop below 85 U.S. cents in a week.

The decline follows Statistics Canada's report today that the merchandise trade surplus for October was $91 million, compared with a $548-million surplus in September.

The government also reported exports to the U.S. — Canada's major trading partner — dropped 6.8 per cent to $3.04 billion in October, the first drop after four consecutive months of increases.

Food Boosts Index

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Consumer Price Index jumped one per cent in October because of higher food prices and the end of some provincial sales tax reductions introduced last spring, Statistics Canada reported today.

The 12-month inflation rate rose to 8.7 per cent from its September level of 8.6 per cent.

A revised consumer price index was used for the first time in calculating the October cost-of-living index.

Statistics Canada said the revision does not mean a break in its month-to-month series of changes in the inflation rate because September was used as a link month, with an index which would work under either system.

Jonestown Deaths . . . 775 And Rising

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Searchers have found at least 775 bodies at the scene of the mass suicide-murder in the Guyanese jungle commune of a U.S. religious sect, almost twice as many as previously counted, the U.S. embassy here reported today.

The embassy said many of the newly-discovered bodies at the Jonestown commune were those of children huddled beneath their parents' remains.

They said investigators had been unable to determine the whereabouts of hundreds of camp residents who apparently were missing. It had been believed many fled the death ritual, hiding in the jungle. The grisly new discoveries gave the answer.

Embassy official Patricia Moser said that as of 1 p.m. today 485 bodies had been removed from the Jonestown agricultural settlement.

She said 20 more had been placed in body bags and a still-continuing hand count had located an additional 270.

Power Outages Bedevil Island

An unidentified problem in the main power line from the mainland to Vancouver Island blacked out most of the southern island for periods ranging from 21 minutes to 4½ hours Thursday night and caused another brief outage this morning.

Thursday night's loss of power was the most widespread in recent years.

It plunged the entire capital region into darkness except for buildings with standby electric generators.

B.C. Hydro spokesman Dorothy Tupper said today power was lost from the mainland at 9:04 p.m. and the cause was still under investigation this morning.

The blackout affected Nanaimo and Port Alberni but Duncan and communities north of Nanaimo escaped.

Police departments recorded little disturbance as a result of the power loss — some broken windows by vandalism in the 700-block Yates and drug store burglaries in Saanich and Sidney — but the outage triggered a wave of phone calls to police and fire switchboards.

Electricity was back on in Oak Bay in just over 20 minutes and other areas were also gradually restored.

But it didn't come back on in Sooke until 1:30 a.m. because of additional problems.

Greater Victoria police reported remarkably few hassles.

People dining out ate by candlelight and at recreation centres they swam, skated and even curled by makeshift or emergency lighting.

At Eaton's, the doors closed a scant five minutes before the power failure. Then the emergency lighting came on and staff continued as usual.

The only case of vandalism the store suffered occurred when someone threw a rock through a window on the View Street side.

The Empress Hotel was plunged into darkness and one person was stuck in an

65 and Get Out Rule Opposed by Doctors

OTTAWA (CP) — The guillotine age limit of 65 for retirement has no basis in medical fact and should be banned, the Canadian Medical Association said Thursday.

In a brief to the special Senate committee on retirement policy, the association said work plays an important role in peoples' lives. To take work away from them "produces a void which may get filled by ill health."

Elderly peoples were entitled to "autonomy, physical and mental health and the continuation of a good life so they were not cast off or institutionalized," said former association president Robert Goudreau.

"The guillotine age limit should be abandoned."

John Bennett, director of professional affairs for the association, said the retirement age of 65 was first introduced in 1884 by German Chancellor Otto von Bismarck for humanitarian reasons. Today reasons for mandatory retirement were strictly economic.

"When Bismarck introduced 65 as the age of retirement, it was a relatively hard age to obtain," Bennett added. Today many people aged 65 were healthy and able to work.

Bennett suggested many people may choose a shorter work week but a longer work life as an alternative to mandatory retirement at age 65.

POLICEMEN ARRESTED

Kinnaird New President Of B.C. Labor Fed

By MIKE HUGHES
Time Staff

The 45 year-old past president of the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council defeated Bob Donnelly by a vote of 626 to 472.

Kinnaird's victory appears to signal a change in the federation's style of union leadership.

During this week's federation convention, Donnelly supporters said they felt the B.C. trade union movement won all its battles with militant industrial and political action and that style should be continued.

Donnelly characterized the Kinnaird group as one seeking a new style for the federation in order to provide a better public relations image for the 250,000 member federation.

But Kinnaird's position was that the difference between the old executive and what he had to offer was not a question of militancy.

Suicide City. . . 8 Dead This Year

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian band reserve has become the subject of a grim joke: Indians and non-Indians are referring to it as Suicide City.

Band leaders and reserve residents are shocked and dismayed by a staggering increase in the suicide rate of young Indians.

Band manager Ernie Elliott said today there have been eight suicides this year — six in the past month and a half.

There have also been 14 attempted suicides.

And three of the suicides have occurred in one family.

Nearly all the victims have been in their teens or early twenties.

Most have died by hanging or shooting.

Elliott said the wave of deaths has stunned the 1,700-member band, residents of B.C.'s largest Indian reserve.

"We don't know why this has happened. We haven't been able to find any answers yet," Elliott said.

Duncan RCMP Sgt. Len Doyle said today an investigation into the problem is being carried out by the federal department of health and welfare, RCMP and the Duncan coroner's office.

But Doyle said he does not feel the problem in Duncan is greater than in any other part of Canada.

He noted that since Jan. 1 this year there have been 11 suicides and 23 attempts at suicides involving non-native residents of the area.

Coroner Tom Lines can offer no explanation for the high suicide rate and deputy coroner, Dr. J.J. Wilson, doubts the suicide wave can be linked to any one single problem.

"It is recognized that one suicide will trigger others in a community on occasion," Wilson said.

"I don't know if anyone can bring it under control. Suicide is a very individual decision."

Elliott said he feels the problems can be attributed to numerous deficiencies such as a lack of housing, jobs and recreational facilities.

He noted the unemployment rate on the reserve is currently running at about 85 per cent and only about 10 per cent of applications for new housing are approved due to lack of funds.

Recreational facilities on the reserve include only four soccer pitches and a couple of basketball courts.

Elliott said a number of young people are depressed and turn to alcohol.

Private Schooler Suspended For Refusing To Bow Head

JEFFREY LAU

TORONTO (CP) — A student at a private boys' school in Oakville, Ont., has been suspended for refusing to bow his head during a daily Anglican prayer service.

Jeffrey Lau, 16, a landed immigrant from Hong Kong and a Grade 12 student at Appleby College, said Edward Larsen, the school's headmaster, told him Wednesday not to return to school until he is ready to bow during chapel prayers.

Bowing heads has always been a custom, but Larsen made it a rule two weeks ago because not all students were doing it.

"I don't have a religion," said Lau. "I cannot bow my head and satisfy my conscience."

Lau has been boarding at the school, where he has been a student for 2½ years. He said tuition and board cost his parents $6,000 a year, and he will lose the school year because of the suspension.

He now is staying at his mother's Toronto apartment, has applied to a public high school and said he will look for a part-time job. His parents disagree with his attitude and have threatened to cut off his allowance unless he returns to the school.

Jack Dickens, assistant headmaster at the school, said Lau was told he is welcome to return to the school "when he's prepared to accept the rules as they are, not just the part he wants."

"It was a matter of disobeying the headmaster. If he refuses to obey the headmaster on any point, then there is no place for him in the school."

Dickens said the school is non-denominational, but 15-minute prayers before classes are compulsory for all students every weekday morning except Friday, when there is a half-hour prayer at noon.

The prayers are read by an Anglican minister. "We don't ask the boys to pray but to lean forward and bow their heads. It's standard procedure," Dickens said.

SPITTING AT POLICEMAN COMMON ASSAULT

EDMONTON (CP) — Spitting at another person constitutes common assault, ruled a provincial court judge before fining a St. Albert, Alta. man for spitting at a city policeman.

Judge George Forbes found Marcel Berezuk, 21, of the Edmonton suburb guilty on a reduced charge of common assault and obstructing a peace officer in the execution of his duty Wednesday, fining him $200 for each offence.

Berezuk had first been charged July 12 with assaulting a police officer after Constable Donald Christal, driving back from a court appearance with two other officers, felt a sudden wetness on the side of his face and arm.

Christal testified he saw Berezuk grinning and the accused spat two more times before the police car pulled his car over. Told he was being arrested, Berezuk refused to leave his car and rolled up the window, which one officer then shattered with his nightstick.

Berezuk testified he had been at the dentists office and was spitting to clear his mouth. He said he started to spit before seeing the parked police car beside him and could not stop himself.

UGANDA CORPSES PLANTED?

DAR ES SALAAM (AP) — Tanzanian forces have discovered the bodies of more than 120 Ugandan soldiers allegedly killed on orders of President Idi Amin, the Tanzania government news agency Shihata said Thursday.

The agency said the bodies were discovered on a hilltop on the Tanzanian side of the Uganda border near the village of Minziro.

Tanzanian and Ugandan forces have been fighting in the area since Uganda invaded northwestern Tanzania three weeks ago. But Shihata said Tanzanian forces are sure they did not kill the Ugandan soldiers found in uniform on the heavily wooded hilltop.

The agency said, "the soldiers were murdered inside Uganda on orders of Idi Amin and were thrown into Tanzania so as to give the impression that they were killed by Tanzanians."

"The aim of the act is to hide Amin's present spate of murders of Ugandans perpetrated by his hired killers."

Sources inside Uganda reported heavy and sustained firing over the weekend near the garrison town of Mbarara, 50 kilometres inside Uganda. Tanzanian officials speculated that Ugandan soldiers may have been fighting among themselves over the spoils of their occupation of some Tanzanian territory.

Bolivia's Pereda Overthrown in Coup

LA PAZ (UPI) — Bolivia's armed forces overthrew President Juan Pereda in a bloodless coup d'etat early this morning, and radio reports said Pereda had fled the country.

The radio reports, as yet unconfirmed, also said army Chief of Staff Gen. David Padilla will be new president of the South American nation.

Earlier, observers said Pereda was a prisoner in the palace.

There were no reports of shooting in the takeover and observers in the capital said the takeover was so quick citizens went to work and found out they had a new government.

Army troops took up positions near the presidential palace.

A communique, issued by army headquarters and signed by Padilla, said the armed forces had taken over the government with the aim of bringing about the Bolivia "that was dreamt of by past generations."

Radio reports said Padilla will be the new president, replacing Pereda who has ruled since 1972. But the reports were not confirmed.

Bolivia is named for the liberator Simon Bolivar, the "George Washington" of South America, but the nation has been racked by 184 coups in 153 years of independence — an average of one of every 10 months.

The army said it moved against Pereda to forestall a march called by the leftist Popular and Democratic Union in defiance of a government ban against the demonstration.

But former President Hernan Siles Zuazo, leader of the leftist Popular and Democratic Union, went on the air shortly and said he supported the coup.

The army communique, announcing the takeover said it would call elections as soon as possible with the aim of installing a new government by Aug. 6, 1979.

Bolivia is one of the three chief producers of tin in the world along with Thailand and Malaysia and the price of tin rose $200 a ton in London early today.

Cyclone Kills 65

COLOMBO (CP) — A cyclone struck the eastern coast of Sri Lanka today, killing at least 65 persons in landslides or under falling houses, authorities reported.

Several scheduled flights due in Colombo were diverted to Bombay, Madras and Bahrain as airport authorities considered landings dangerous because of the storm.

An exact casualty toll was not available because communications with affected areas were severed.

Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa said the cyclone was moving northwest at a speed of 160 km.p.h.

Now She Can Sleep Without Fear. . .

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time in almost a year, Montreal librarian Asta Sokov will be able to fall asleep unafraid and "in a room without lights."

The 46-year-old, Soviet-born Canadian citizen was arrested last Jan. 9 on charges of smuggling goods out of the Soviet Union and sentenced to eight years in prison.

But Thursday evening she arrived home on a flight from Zurich, after Canadian government intervention led to a pardon. She had served eight months of her term.

It was an emotional scene at Mirabel International Airport, as a dozen of Mrs. Sokov's friends and co-workers, who had kept her spirits up with letters to her in prison, wept, embraced her and gave her gifts and flowers.

Looking weary from the long plane ride but otherwise in excellent health, she said the lights burned constantly, day and night, in her isolation cell at the central Moscow prison where she spent most of the last 11 months, first awaiting trial and then serving her sentence.

"The guards were always polite to me, and I was never mistreated," Mrs. Sokov said, but her bitterness was evident all the same.

When a correspondent for Radio Canada International began interviewing her in Russian, she said crisply: "Please don't speak to me in that language when we are in Canada. It makes me sick to hear Russian!"

Mrs. Sokov was arrested while passing through Soviet customs on her way home after a three-week vacation.

Soviet authorities charged her with trying to smuggle out of the country 32,000 rubles (about $45,200) worth of diamonds, rare art works, books, silver and platinum objects.

In June she was sentenced to eight years in a labor camp—two years less than the maximum sentence—but had been held until her release in the Moscow jail.

Her request for an appeal was turned down during the summer, and although it seemed at the time that all possibility of early relase had faded, she said she never lost hope despite occasional depression.

Earlier this week, after the Canadian government intervened on humanitarian grounds, she was pardoned by the Supreme Soviet.

Airport hugs for Mrs. Sokov

Mrs. Sokov said she had met an elderly Leningrad couple during her visit to Russia who asked her to bring back some jewelry and religious icons to their son living in Montreal.

The couple, later called to testify at Mrs. Sokov's trial, denied "ever even seeing" the objects, she said. But Mrs. Sokov appeared to bear no malice, saying; "They were not stupid, and they knew they would be sent to a labor camp if they admitted owning these things."

She said she was not aware she was committing a crime in bringing back the objects, which included two small bracelets with diamonds, five rings with diamonds, one set of earrings, one pendant, two icons and some personal books.

No More Sacrifices, Begin Warns U.S.

United Press International

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told visiting American senators today that Israel has made all the sacrifices it can in the peace treaty negotiations with Egypt, the national radio said.

Earlier today, Egypt published the text of a draft peace treaty, the first time that the full text has been disclosed. But Cairo rejected Israel's "take it or leave it offer" and said more negotiations are needed.

Israel had no official comment on the document printed in Egypt's semi-official Al Ahram newsapers.

Israel's national radio said Begin told the six senators at his official residence in Jerusalem that he was optimistic and remained hopeful the obstacles can be overcome to signing a treaty.

"He told them that Israel has made all the sacrifices it can in the negotiations," the state-run radio said. "However, he told them Israel prefers to make sacrifices for peace instead of war."

Begin's cabinet approved the draft pact Tuesday but rejected an Egyptian demand for a timetable for implementing Palestinian autonomy to be included in the treaty.

Begin said Israel would be willing to negotiate a timetable after the signing treaty.

The Washington negotiations, which began Oct. 12, have bogged down over the issue of whether the Egyptian-Israeli treaty should be linked to an overall Middle East settlement — and if so, how explicitly.

The Israeli cabinet this week approved a U.S-drafted treaty with a vaguely worded linkage but rejected Egyptian demands for a timetable to implement Palestinian autonomy in the occupied West Bank and Gaza strip.

"Take it or leave it," Dayan then declared.

But Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil Thursday told reporters in Cairo his nation still demands linkage and called for a resumption of the Washington talks.

"How can he (Dayan) make such a statement? How can he put such a pressure on Egypt? We insist that negotiations be resumed as soon as the other party agrees," Khalil said.

"Egypt believes in the necessity of linkage," Khalil said. "As to its method, form, ways of implementation, all this can be agreed upon."

Callaghan Bid To Woo Smith

LONDON (Reuter) — A personal envoy of British Prime Minister James Callaghan will leave for southern Africa next week to try to arrange an all-party conference to end Rhodesia's guerrilla war.

The British initiative to settle the Rhodesian independence dispute and end the bush war there was announced Thursday by Callaghan in Parliament. He said he was willing to preside at such an all-party conference in England early next year.

Cledwyn Hughes, a former Labor minister, will visit southern Africa to establish whether a high-powered conference on these lines was likely to be successful.

Callaghan said U.S. President Carter was supporting this exploratory mission and that Stephen Low, U.S. ambassador to Zambia, will accompany Hughes on the round of discussions in Rhodesia, Zambia, Tanzania, Mozambique, Botswana and Angola. The party also hopes to visit South Africa and Nigeria.

The transitional government in Salisbury, headed by white Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black leaders, has expressed readiness to take part in an all-party conference without pre-conditions. But the guerrilla leaders of the Patriotic Front have recently appeared skeptical about the prospects of a successful meeting.

Callaghan said Thursday that the basis for the proposed conference will be the Anglo-American proposals for black majority rule. But he also said the British government will not stick rigidly to them if "other proposals came forward which got the consent of all the parties" and matched the same principles.

A flotation sleep system duplicates a conventional bed in many aspects — size, appearance and adaptation to existing bedroom furniture. A flotation does:

1. Function as replacement mattress and box spring
2. Co-ordinate with any case goods
3. Utilize existing conventional bedding of same size
4. Weighs only 1/3 total of regular waterbed (750-780 pounds in King)
5. Provide sufficient lateral support for water without having unsightly wooden exterior.
6. Have sufficient insulation to preclude the use of a heater
7. Offer all the benefits of flotation sleep without all the expensive, cumbersome and unsightly disadvantages

Barrett the Bombastic

Restraint is not a mark of opposition leader Dave Barrett's debating style. When he gets the opportunity he can out-bombast the best stump speaker. Case in point: his speech this week to the British Columbia Federation of Labor annual convention in Vancouver.

Elect Social Credit next time, he told the trade unionists, and witness the "complete destruction of the trade union movement in this province."

Discount this the usual 40 per cent for political hyperbole, and it's still a dumb thing to say.

Barrett claimed that if Bill Bennett's Socreds are re-elected next year they will bring in right-to-work legislation that will drastically weaken organized labor in B.C., by outlawing the closed shop and mandatory union membership. How does the New Democratic Party leader know?

Well, a Socred from Kamloops told his hometown newspaper after last month's party convention that the only reason Social Credit delegates defeated right to work resolutions was political caution in the face of an impending election.

But right after the election, claims Barrett, the heavy hand will come down hard.

This sort of reasoning may play before an audience of committed New Democrats and militant labor leaders, but what's the real story?

If Premier Bennett and his cabinet are such stern enemies of unions, why didn't they bring in the hammer right after they were elected? They swept into office on a tide of revenge, and if any time was politically right for an anti-labor offensive, the spring of 1976 was it, when Social Credit was strong and confident of a public mandate to legislate away some of the excesses of Barrett's three years.

But nothing happened. The worst fears of the B.C. Fed evaporated; the most terrible thing the new government did was to amend the labor code to make it slightly more difficult to organize the unorganized. Today, union membership is at its highest levels ever.

Sure, some Social Crediters — even the odd cabinet minister — talk of abolishing the union shop, but then as premier, Barrett had more than his share of eccentrics, too. If his government had done everything the NDP told it to in duly-authorized convention resolutions (forgetting about the oddball ones which were defeated), Barrett would have nationalized MacMillan Bloedel, the B.C. Telephone Co. and a few other major corporations. Just for starters.

That didn't happen, of course. Just as the extremists in Social Credit under W.A.C. Bennett who used to call for the nationalization of the banks and the distribution of cash to all citizens somehow never saw their dreams translated into reality. At every convention they kept talking about the A plus B theorem and the need to return to true Social Credit monetary theories. Just like the NDP harbors a leavening of marxists and communists, utopians and dreamers. But their plans are still on paper, and Major Douglas is still a stranger at the provincial finance department.

Subtlety is not the NDP leader's long suit. The party has seized the right to work issue and is going to wring the most out of it, no matter that the political reality is that such legislation is impractical and impossible. It's distributing a four-page newspaper insert entitled The Ultimate Con intended for union publications and the like that commits some gross distortions in discussing right to work.

For one, it tells us next to nothing about right to work in Canada. Almost three pages are devoted to detailing the alleged horrors in right to work states in the U.S., who were the American founders of the movement some 30 years ago and the findings of an American academic on the failure of right to work legislation to fulfill its promise of attracting industry.

That's great for American labor historians, but what does it tell British Columbians about the strength of right to work proponents here? Not much. Perhap because the truth is that they are a small, although vocal, minority within Social Credit and like the NDP's radical left wing, are ignored.

We're not sure who's conning whom here, but if Barrett actually believes what he said on Wednesday he's mastered the art of self-deception.

Brickbat and a Bouquet

A bouquet and a brickbat today for Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy on two decisions made recently concerning the spending of B.C.'s share of lottery profits.

The recent donation of $25,000 from the Western Canada Lottery Foundation to the Vancouver Art Gallery towards the expense of restoring some 100 Emily Carr oil paintings, drawings and watercolors is a first-rate example of the way lottery proceeds should be spent.

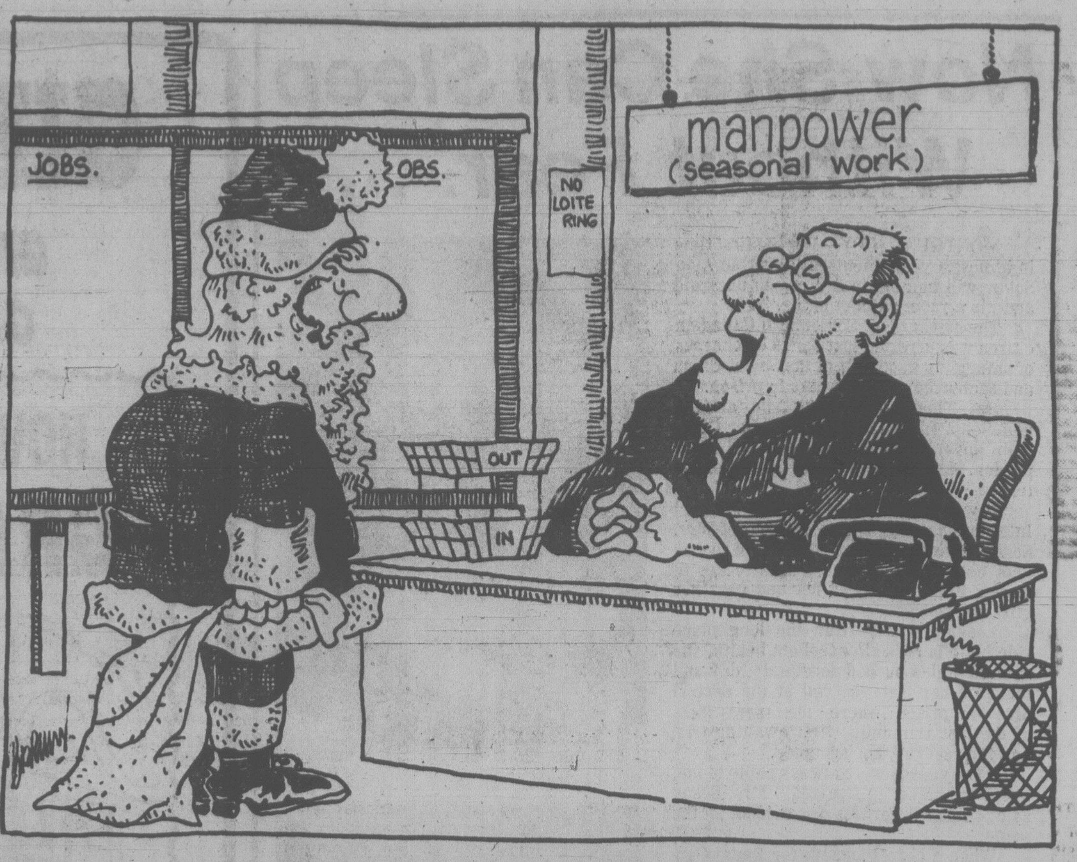
Similarly, her personal role in finding space for a permanent exhibition in a building on Wharf Street next to the tourism ministry's headquarters of the government's own Emily Carrs and further material on the painter's life in Victoria deserves recognition. Good work on both counts.

She has also given way to public demands for information about where the millions of dollars in provincial lottery profits are being spent — a step forward in accountability. But she has done so in a manner far from graceful.

McCarthy commissioned newspaper advertisements to run twice a year carrying lists of lottery grant recipients. Relenting on the policy of lottery secrecy is a good decision, but now she is relenting to excess in the other direction. Is it really necessary to spend tens of thousands of dollars in lottery funds to place ads in every B.C. newspaper?

Did anyone ask for this? When opposition MLAs and independent groups wrote the provincial secretary asking for information on who got how much money and what the criteria were for deciding the allocation of grants, they got the run-around. Now, they'll be on the receiving end of an expensive, splashy publicity machine.

Really, all that's wanted is a simple mechanism for answering queries about who got how much money. A monthly compilation mailed out to the press and interested sports, recreation and cultural groups, and available to individuals upon request from their local government agent would more than suffice.



" . . . and what sort of seasonal work were you looking for ? . . ."

Rhodesian Bishop's Opinion

I refer to a letter from the Rev. R. G. Attwell ('Blacks Have Just Cause'; Times, Oct. 12) which has just been forwarded to me. It seems to me there are three issues at least raised in this.

First, the question of warfare in Rhodesia being between blacks and whites. It is not. Secondly, whether there are any efforts at negotiation going on in this country to bring an end to the war; thirdly, whether the World Council of Churches has any Christian right to take sides in an issue which will definitely involve giving tacit support to armed violence.

Dead served for soup

☐ The war in Rhodesia, long drawn out and bloody as it is, is between blacks and blacks more than between whites and blacks. People are naive if they really imagine that because a man is black he will automatically be friends with another of the same color. Such naivete takes no account whatever of tribal solidarity and tribal faction fighting which is a lamentable but nevertheless real part of African life in history and today. It may not be widely realized that the "people in the middle" are as likely to be assaulted by armed bands from either side, or both, and even more likely to be subject to the same bands exercising political persuasion in the future.

But when people are mutilated and spare parts of their anatomy are then boiled and served as soup or worse for the victims or his relations to consume at gunpoint, one wonders whether these "gentlemen" are the ones who really need encouragement by the World Council of Churches. For make no mistake, such atrocities are performed daily. Perhaps in the safety and security of B.C., the idea of people being herded into their huts and roasted alive, or the fact that small babies have been frequently bayoneted before and after death, may seem remote, unreal, mere propaganda. Let me assure you that such is not the case here.

☐ I fear that people who are not really knowledgeable about Southern Africa may assume that the situation in Rhodesia is the same as in South Africa. As one who spent 16 years in South Africa and now three in Rhodesia, I assure you that this is not so. Relationships in this country, although at present polarizing on racial lines, are infinitely better than they have been in South Africa. I wonder how recently have the relationships between whites and red Indians in North America become fair, equal and just? I wonder how fair, equal and just are the dealings between Africans in Uganda and elsewhere? Although politicians have dragged their feet for years in establishing a more just society, nevertheless in this country things have moved in the last nine months. But this has not seen any diminution of the war from black leaders who have hitherto protested that they wanted majority rule. It is now more evident than ever that some do not want majority rule — they want rule and power achieved through the gun.

This kind of rule is achieved through naked terror and acts of terrorism are being performed, with black Rhodesians suffering far more than whites. Nobody is anything but stunned by the fact that in this country an average of 37 people die each day and at the moment the proportion is about 14 blacks to each white.

Visit gives the lie

☐ Whether the WCC does or does not do good works with much of its money is not disputed. I know for a fact that a very large amount of money is spent throughout the world by the WCC assisting community development projects. But, and it is a very large but, to give moral support to dependents of those who achieve their ends by violence, without giving the same support to those who are their victims, makes one wonder whether the WCC has not taken to itself the role of being God, for only God can give a true judgment. Here in Rhodesia, we wonder why the WCC does not give similar support to the relatives of the IRA in Ulster?

What a pity that the Victoria presbytery of the Anglican Church as given tacit support to violence, being themselves far removed from the situation where reconciliation is still possible.

Finally, the recent visit of the four members of the executive council to the U.S. surely gives the lie to the statement that the present leaders in Rhodesia are not willing to negotiate. — Johne de Costa, Dean, Cathedral Church of St. Mary and All Saints, Salisbury, Rhodesia.

Shattering Tax

Wescraft Manufacturing Co. is really shattered by Ottawa's tax on double-glazed windows. The federal government has shown so much leadership in getting across to Canadians ways to save energy in their houses. Double-glazed windows reduce heat loss by well over 50 per cent compared to single-glazed windows and now Victorians have to pay five per cent more for these insulating windows. Why? Because Ottawa thinks it's easier to collect the tax than not collect it (previously, single-glazed windows were taxed and double-glazed exempt) and also, because adjacent walls contain taxable materials. Why soak the people because it's easier to administer a tax than a non-tax? Do we want windowless houses? This tax could add $75-$275 to the price of windows depending upon style and quality. The construction market in B.C. is lousy, mortgage rates have risen six times this year, why make it worse by more taxes applied without logic?

What really gets us is that the federal government has done an excellent job in making us all aware of the need to save energy, has assisted many small businesses (Victoria's businesses no exception) in providing a service and at the same time reducing unemployment. Now they are seemingly blowing it for a few tax bucks.

We realize there are financial problems but the finance minister is not solving them this way. We ask him to reconsider this recent tax on a well recognized insulating product. — E.W. Wellwood, Wescraft Manufacturing Ltd., 2189 Keating X Road.

Waste of Money

I wonder how many taxpayers like myself have watched for many long weeks a new playground concept being built at the Simcoe Street entrance to James Bay school. A few years ago a similar thing was built and recently removed. It seems to me a child would be courting disaster to climb around on some of these devices, especially in the winter months when they are wet and slippery.

What a waste of money! Surely the whole of McDonald park (including a playground) and a well equipped gymnasium should suffice. — M. Martin, Simcoe Street.

Write the Minister

I wish to make some comments about Health Minister Bob McClelland's letter of Nov. 7, entitled More Beds on Way. The doctors, and staff who care for patients in Victoria's acute care hospitals are maimed by having 260 of just over 1,000 beds blocked by patients waiting for extended care and intermediate care beds.

There is also an equal number of patients only slightly less sick, waiting at home; i.e. a total of 516 waiting for a bed to be constructed.

Mr. McClelland defends this misuse of acute hospital beds by pointing out that Glengarry will have 150 new extended care beds in January, 1979 and St. Mary's Priory another 50 later in 1979, with more intermediate beds to follow and in the planning stages. Meanwhile, the hospitals struggle with only 75 per cent of their usable beds in commission, and every corridor, treatment room and cubby hole is overflowing. All but the most urgent surgery is cancelled and only emergencies are admitted.

There is a remedy. The minister could, and should, give priority to filling newly constructed beds, as available, from the acute hospitals first. Bob McClelland might be persuaded to do this if everyone who has had surgery cancelled, or has become sicker while they waited for admission, or relatives who have been inconvenienced by wrecked family arrangements, or nurses frustrated by working short-staffed and under impossible circumstances, if you would all write to the minister or phone and ask him to take a second look at his priorities for filling new constrution — then, we might get our hospitals back so that they can be used for their intended purpose — acute care. — J. Douglas Critchley, Past President, Victoria Medical Society.

Remember Animals

At this time of year when thoughts turn to gifts for the family, friends and needy persons, one group that seems to be overlooked are those who care for our furred and feathered friends, which unlike humans cannot draw welfare or unemployment insurance. They, too, are God's creatures.

We refer specifically to the Good Shepherd Shelter at Mill Bay. This tiny group of devoted people labor year round to care for abandoned animals of all types and are in desperate need of help to pay for feed and additional shelter.

Cannot we, the general public, most of whom care for animals, take the time to give a helping hand either physically, financially or spiritually, to this dedicated animal shelter. — S. and H. Hives, Sidney.

Raymond J. Pellow

I am writing to your newspaper in the faint hope of tracing a resident (or former resident) of Victoria whom I have tried unsuccessfully to locate through all the more usual agencies.

The gentleman in question is one Raymond John Pellow; he was a warrant officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and was stationed in Britain during the latter part of the war. I believe that he later served in the Far East, but I am not sure, and then returned to Canada.

Should he read this, I should be very pleased if he would write to me at the address below. Thank you very much for your help. — Robert Llewellyn, Plas yr Antur O.P. centre, Fairbourne, Gwynedd, Wales.

What Benefits?

Your recent front page item FIRA Blocks Data Firm (Times, Nov. 4)raises some question as to the credibility of the provincial ministry of economic development.

According to a spokesman for the ministry "it would be a significant addition to the Victoria economy." Terrific, but so far the only addition we have are eight people on the unemployed list. The equipment to be used by McGraw-Hill has been purchased outside of Canada and local suppliers of equipment and material have already lost revenue.

If Data Communications (McGraw-Hill) are successful in their plan to sign up "most real estate boards in western Canada" I do not believe that their estimate of about 50 employees within three years will offset the total number of people now employed in western Canada producing real estate catalogues.

I must ask the ministry to consider all of the other real estate boards in British Columbia and their employees in such places as Vancouver, New Westminister, Okanagan, Kootenays, Cariboo, etc. and on into the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

If it is the intention of McGraw-Hill to establish a new printing and publishing industry in Victoria then they should get all the support possible to create new jobs even if the profits do go south of the border.

In this era there is more than enough data about all of us stored in Canadian computers, let us at least keep this information here.

The Victoria Real Estate Board is to be commended for their desire to provide as efficiently as posssible the most comprehensive materials to their members and the community but the ministry of economic development seem to be pleadging the case of VREB for the wrong reasons. — J. Mitchell, 3481 Henderson Road.

No Wreaths

Going downtown on Nov. 10 I was shocked and saddened by the lack of commemorative wreaths or any other sign of remembrance of those men and women who gave their lives and health to ensure us our freedom.

Christmas decorations were in abundance — would we, I wonder, be celebrating Christmas as we know and love it if it were not for the sacrifice of so many. — Mrs. Ruth Gilson, 4402 Shelbourne Street.

Likes Stamps

The undersigned, who is a man disabled because of a heart disease, would like to get some stamps for the long winter days. I am kindly asking if some of your readers maybe would like to send me some. I have interest for everything. I have to say that I don't have much for exchange, since my resources are rather limited.

Thank you in advance. — Andreas F. Nielsen, Alsgade 52BII, DK-6400-Sonderbor, Denmark.

Don't Hibernate

To those who have cats and kittens: please be careful to whom you give them. Sometimes people love kittens and hate cats, and when they reach mating age they dump them anywhere around the countryside or try to drown them in lakes, rivers or the sea, or even put them in the garbage disposal bins and put the tops on.

Sometimes they are rescued and given good homes, but many times they die tragic deaths from exposure, hunger and mutilation by cars and from other animals.

Please remember that cats are not wild animals and that they do not go underground in the cold weather like rats, rabbits and foxes, or sleep in hollow trees like bears.

A few months ago some tourists on a beach on Saltspring Island heard some very loud shreiks and found some small kittens on the beach, abondoned by their owners. They were being eaten alive by crows. Some of them were dead with their eyes pecked out, or had to be put to sleep. Luckily three did manage to get a good home.

When the cat's guardian angel on Saltspring Island goes out at all hours of the day and night, although she is very ill at times, she sometimes finds baby kittens dead on the ground from exposure or disease.

Lately she saw a little one with its little front paws out in front of it as if it were praying. It was dead from the cold. One dog was found dead, tied by a short chain in the woods far from any homes so no one could hear his cries as he died.

Please get your cats and dogs neutered and spayed. If you are on restricted incomes, the SPCA Cats' Protection League, Greater Victoria Animal Crusaders or Pet Population Control Centre will help with the costs. — Mrs. Olive M. U. Hamilton, 56 Sims Avenue.

Indira Gandhi . . . her successors are fumbling

Gandhi: Not Welcome But She's Inevitable

Manchester Guardian
An Editorial

The Member of Parliament for Chikmagalur's "private" visit to Britain, predictably, turned out very public indeed. It was obviously planned thus. The rehabilitation of Indira Gandhi involves an election back home, but a deal of fence-mending and bridge-building abroad. Last year the lady was in disgrace. Now she may take tea with prime ministers and receive warm toasts from cabinet ministers. She is a world figure again.

That, inevitably, raised much protest. The Shah Commission report on Mrs. Gandhi's emergency produced devastating evidence of repression and outright dictatorship. Few who care for India's freedom will have relished the toasts and the fireside chats last week. In many Western eyes, Mrs. Gandhi's reputation has gone for good. The chorus of protest is well deserved.

But the chorus echoes uneasily across India itself. Chikmagalur, in the deepest South, was spared the worst excesses of the Emergency — and, therefore, was ripe ground for a comeback. Nevertheless, Mrs. Gandhi did choose the democratic route for her return. She may defend her quasi-dictatorship still, but she does not "foresee" the possibility of a recurrence. Many charges and possible trials may yet arise to weigh her down: but there was no legal impediment to Chikmagalur and the overwhelming vote in that constituency must command some respect. You can't defend freedom by damning free elections.

Equally Mrs. Gandhi does represent one of the live choices facing India. For more than a quarter of a century, against amazing odds, the country has held tight to democracy — the one threat to that order turned out at a democratic poll. Such lessons are there to be learned by all concerned: but so is a deeper lesson. Democracy on the Indian model needs a constructive choice: a party of the old, traditional order, serving the needs of the villages and the customs of the country, and a party of change, industry, development. Two national parties: two potential governments. For a while last year is seemed that the Janata wave had, in a handful of weeks, achieved the vital breakthrough. Congress, the party of Nehru, had governed too long, split too frequently; it was tired and discredited. Mrs. Gandhi, by plunging into her Emergency, had signalled that fatigue.

The Emergency may be seen as a tawdry excuse to foist a Gandhi dynasty upon a disintegrating nation: but it was more than that. At least in theory, it summed up the frustration of seeking rapid change in a country of despair and inertia. The Janata election balanced change against freedom, and found overwhelmingly in freedom's favor. It yoked together an almost ludicrous array of smaller parties and gave them the chance, united, to govern India.

In short, the national party of conservatism was born. On most counts the 18 months after the birth have been a bitter disappointment. The ludicrous array has squabbled endlessly. Mr. Desai has brooded ineffectually. Janata looks a rabble in search of oblivion. What the party needs, perhaps, is the chill spur to action a potent Parliamentary opposition can inflict on a weak administration.

But there has been little threat in Parliament. Congress, deprived of its left wing and virtually annihilated at the election, has been pale, timid and preoccupied. Janata has had to fall apart to provoke any real debate. Which does, alas, leave India with Mrs. Gandhi. She is tainted and besmirched but she remains the force of the other India — an India of reform and development. One may wish her gone from the scene; one may think her unfit ever again to hold public office. But the choice is an Indian one and the choice can now be squarely again before an Indian electorate.

The floundering Desai or the Iron Lady? Many in the West who, like India in 1977, put freedom above all else will hope most fervently that Mrs. Gandhi never again rules in New Delhi. But the choice is for India to make — and one reluctant conclusion must be that, without Nehru's daughter, the Indian Parliametary arena is sterile and the hopes for Janata's growth are barren. Mrs. Gandhi may not be welcome: but she may be inevitable.

Heating Up Toward Disaster?

By JOANNE OMANG
Washington Post

It now seems almost certain that humankind's brief reign on earth has guaranteed our great-grandchildren a warmer climate to live in than anything the planet has seen over the past 5,000 years. Not content with merely knowing this, however, scientists for the first time are considering the possibility that we might be able to do something about it.

A warmer earth might not necessarily be a better place to live. Temperate variations from place to place could be extreme and the climate might actually get colder in some regions. Warmer weather is likely to bring searing drought to the U.S. Corn Belt but bumper crops to Russia. Snowfall could be much heavier during the shorter winters and weather in general might be more turbulent.

"Never in the history of mankind's affairs have planners and decision-makers been given such a forewarning — with the possible exception of the biblical story of Joseph's advice to the pharoah about the seven years of plenty and the seven years of famine," wrote W. W. Kellogg of the National Center for Atmospheric Research at Boulder, Colo., in a recent World Meterological Association bulletin.

Not only do we have a pretty good idea what is likely to happen, he added, "action would be taken to avoid (the warming) if we really wanted to."

It has been a major achievement for climatologists even to reach a majority view on the warming trend, and there are still dissident voices. Talk of doing something about the trend or learning to manage it to avoid future ice ages is wildly premature in the eyes of most. Yet many admit their main goal these days is to build the pile of evidence high and strong enough to convince sluggish politicians and planners that the change is coming and that they ought to consider some kind of action.

"Chances are the decision-makers won't take much notice until the statistics show a dramatic warming curve, and by then it will be very difficult to turn off," said Murray Mitchell, a senior research climatologist at the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

Warmer climate could mean drought for central plains

"Turning it off" would involve somehow cutting back on the worldwide burning of fossil fuels. Oil, gas, coal and wood give off carbon dioxide, among other things, when burned, and it is the steady buildup of carbon dioxide (CO2) through the ages that is believed to have caused the warming trend. The gas prevents heat from radiating naturally out into space and the result is what has come to be called a "greenhouse effect."

As the world has industrialized, burning more fuel every day, CO2 concentrations have increased steadily. About half of what is emitted remains in the atmosphere: the other half is absorbed by plant life as part of photosynthesis or dissolves in the oceans.

Since Charles Keeling of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography began keeping accurate records of the buildup in 1958, CO2 has been tracked as increasing by about 4 per cent per year. This translates into a northern hemisphere summertime average by the year 2000 — just 21 years away — almost two degrees higher than it is now: 69.1 degrees instead of the current 67.3 degrees, according to NOAA.

That may not seem like much, but in climatic history it is phenomenal. It is the warmest average of the last 1,000 years. It means a growing season roughly 10 days longer for the U.S. plains states, and one estimate puts that at $30 million more in wheat crops if wind and rain remain equal.

The problem is that wind and rain probably will not remain equal, but back to that in a moment. Since the temperature shifts will be more dramatic toward the polar regions, life at the 60 degree north latitude line will be 4 or 5 degrees warmer, affecting Leningrad, Oslo, Scotland, Hudson Bay and Anchorage.

Growing time could be 20 days more in those areas, and for the tiny flowers and shrubs of today's summer north of the Arctic Circle (66.6 degrees north latitude), it could be 6 or 7 degrees warmer for 30 days, a truly revolutionary shift in potential argicultural patterns.

Rainfall is also likely to move. The more or less permanent polar air currents probably will shift farther north, taking with them the reliable rain that grows wheat in the U.S. Midwest. That will be good news for Canada, combined with its warmer temperatures, but the soil is not as rich there and the net effect could be a drop in food production. Left behind will be a true desert in the area east of the Rockies.

The same trend could shift rain and warmth from some of the wheat fields in Russia, Australia and Argentina, the world's other major granaries, to areas that are now dry, chilly scrubland suited mainly for sheep. Other Russian grain areas would prosper under the change. When mini-ice ages and unexplained changes have created such shifts before, there has always been massive social dislocation at best. At worst there has been famine and polical upheaval.

"We might decide that coal burning has such a tremendous negative effect on the climate that we can't have

All of the shifts, barely if at all visible yet, will intensify by the year 2050, when CO2 concentrations will have doubled if current trends continue. The northern hemisphere summer will be 3 degrees warmer than now; Arctic Circle rises may reach 10 degrees. The crust of ice over the Arctic Ocean will begin melting.

Although this crust is only about 39 feet thick at best, it apparently never has melted completely in the past million years. Even if it does now, there will be little visible change in the earth's sea levels. Only massive melting of the mile-thick ice of Greenland and Anarctica could really raise the tides, and although scientists are measuring the melt rate already, few if any of them expect a major change there within the next 2,000 or 3,000 years.

The last time the earth has been as warm as it is likely to be in 2050 was 5,000 years ago, at the very dawn of civilization. The great forests then were 60 miles farther north here and in Europe, North Africa was abloom. There was more rain in Europe and Iran and less in Scandinavia than there is now. A belt of grassland swept across North America into much of what is now eastern forest.

Most current computer models have a strange construction of the world weather system. They put a mathematical wall at the equator, dealing only with the northern hemisphere. They include temperature readings on a small part of the ocean surface, ignore the fact that seabottom water is continually welling to the surface, and ignore the fact that all the particles of dust and soot and pollen in the air are very different from one another. Some of the predictions that result are just the opposite of what one might expect.

For example, an early effect of the warming trend might be more snow. Not quite as much ice would freeze every year near the poles, so there would be more water surface available to evaporate in the sun.

That would make the air more humid, which would increase precipitation over the earth as a whole, which would mean deeper snow in the winters. Continuing accumulation at the poles might even reduce the level of the world's seas a bit for the first hundred years or so, just the opposite of what a warming trend suggests.

Some scientists continue to doubt there is enough proof there will even be a warming trend. Reid A. Bryson, a climatologist at the University of Wisconsin, insists that carbon particles and other emissions that go along with burning fossil fuels tend to cool things off by reflecting heat out of the atmosphere, canceling out the warming effect of the CO2.

Bryson goes further and says, in fact, that things may actually be cooling off. Volcanoes, he says, are erupting and spewing cooling dust fast enough to overcome the CO2 greenhouse and speed us on our way to the next ice age if the trend continues.

Heck on Wheels

Norman Rockwell and I never saw things eye to eye when we worked together on the Saturday Evening Post. Norman was illustrating covers and I was trying to sell the finished product. The selling was hard labor.

I would strap on my roller skates, sling a canvas bag containing two dozen Saturday Evening Posts over my shoulder and begin by ringing doorbells. The sales pitch was simple: "Want to buy a Saturday Evening Post?" As the week progressed, it became tinged with subtle pathos: "You don't want to buy a Saturday Evening Post, I suppose?"

During the final day or two of each week's sales campaign, when the imminent arrival of next week's batch of Posts loomed like the Wehrmacht massing on the borders of the soul, I would post myself at a strategic traffic light and dart among idling cars shouting, "Saturday Evening Post!"

In good weeks, the sales profit ran as high as 25 cents, which, even though a nickle could buy three apples in those days, did not strike me as the kind of revenue that was going to induce J. P. Morgan to put out the red carpet when I arrived to establish a line of credit.

It was clear to me that the fault was largely Norman's. Although I was only eight, or nine, or ten at the time, I had seen enough of the mass market to realize that Norman's vision of reality was hopelessly askew. The world whose doorbell I rang hungered for tales of illicit passion, gore and depravity, and was shameless about saying so.

Mounting three flights of stairs on wheeled feet, banging at apartment door, flashing Norman's vision of America, I would be met by a slattern in beer fumes declaring the only magazine she wanted was "True Confessions."

Men sat around the house in their undershirts growing whiskers in that America. Permanent unemployment tends to make a man indifferent to the dictates of "Gentlemen's Quarterly" and sour of temper towards midgets on roller skates peddling Norman's wholesome folks.

"Why don't you sell something good like 'True Detective'?"

". . . 'Spicy Adventure'?"

". . . 'Doc Savage'?"

I never told Norman what the world was really like out there. The Saturday Evening Post did not tolerate its business officers trying to interfere with its editorial content. Consequently, Norman never drew a boozy woman in bare feet at the front door announcing her preference for tales of adultery, nor the look in the eye of an unshaven man in his undershirt when he tells you he'd rather look at pictures of mutilated bodies (preferably female).

The disagreement between Norman and me was never expressed. As a result, Norman went on painting dogs as winsomely lovable pooches instead of nasty, snarling carnivores ready to pounce at the first sound of a roller skate wheel on the front porch.

Long afterwards it occurred to me that if I had gone to him and said, "Look, Norman, I'm dying out here trying to sell these wholesome characters and phoney mutts you're painting," he would have smiled and painted me as an apple-cheeked nine year old with a patch on my corduroy knickers and innocence sticking out all over my cowlick. He was that insistent about refusing to see the world as it is instead of as it should be.

ROCKWELL . . . innocence

When he died the other day people who have to comment on such things stated that despite his mass audience — perhaps the largest any painter has ever had — he was not an artist, but an illustrator. I don't know. There are many definitions of art. Somebody has said that art is a lie that helps us to perceive the truth, and it seems to me that this pretty well expresses what his work was about.

His paintings are graphic fairytales about Americans. They speak of a people unbelievably decent and innocent. That we were not during the age he painted is beside the point; the fact is that Americans in that time thought of themselves as such. And, indeed, acted on that assumption when the age culminated in World War II.

In Not So Wild A Dream, one of the definitive books for students of the Second World War, Eric Sevareid writes that he was frequently astonished and appalled by the innocence in which American soldiers went to death for a purpose of which they understood nothing except that it was fundamently decent.

This old sense of innocence, which we have now lost, had bleak political consequences, beginning with our refusal to set realistic war aims in the 1940s and ending with the triumph of the notion that the alternative to innocence must be cynicism.

I didn't understand Norman's significance in the old days. All I could see was that he didn't know what it was like trying to sell the Saturday Evening Post on roller skates. He saw things truer than I did. It was an honor to work with him.

Modern Sluicing Revives Lure of the Old Klondike

WHITEHORSE (CP) — Eighty years have passed since the first frenzied cries of "gold!" echoed along the wilderness creeks of the Klondike.

The creek bottoms have been panned, mucked and dredged so often that it is hard to imagine the tiniest molecule of gold having gone unnoticed.

Gustav Schmid knows better. His company expects to take 40,000 to 80,000 ounces of gold next year from one of the Klondike's former gold-fever hot spots.

He says the gold will be taken simply by applying modern techniques that follow the laws of physics.

Schmid is an international financier who operates out of Liechtenstein and West Germany. He and some Swiss financiers put money into a placer mining operation in 1975 and formed B. E. L. Yukon Establishment.

Placer mining involves dumping gold-bearing gravel into a sluice box and washing it with water. The water carries away the gravel and leaves the heavier gold glittering on the box bottom.

The Klondike gold seekers of 1898 used sluice boxes and the method has not changed much. Large operations now dredge up gold creeks, push huge amounts of gravel into large sluice boxes and pick out the gold.

Schmid's company began using the conventional sluice method on the Sixtymile River. He visited the operation and decided it was not producing enough gold.

He says he ordered the crew to put a front-end loader bucket at the end of the sluice. Washed-out gravel caught in the bucket was panned and Schmid's suspicions were confirmed — there was more gold in the gravel tailings than in the sluice box.

"From that day on I was concerned about improving the technique of recovery."

His discovery made sense. The modern sluice box operations were handling large pieces of gravel and the water pressure needed to move them also was carrying away the smallest pieces of gold.

Schmid says he put the problem to a number of German industries and after various studies, he came up with a design for an improved placer mine plant.

The new plant basically is a series of hoppers, conveyors and screening systems. Gravel is scraped into the system by heavy equipment. It is sorted, screened and washed so that in the final process all that is left is a concentrate of various heavy metals, gold among them.

This concentrate is shipped to a mint for melting nd separation. It is the key to the entire operation.

"We are not looking only for gold," says Schmid. "We are looking for heavy metals. The moment you look just for gold, you lose all the other heavy minerals."

The first Klondike gold seekers wanted only chunks of gold, and later the dust. The dredging operations that followed also were after gold only.

Schmid says the income from the other heavy minerals should at least cover the expenses of operating the plant. The gold then becomes pure profit.

He estimates that the new plant produces four times more gold than a conventional sluice operation.

"With this plant we have been able to revolutionize the technique of placer mining," he adds.

B. E. L. Yukon expects to build about 10 new placer plants in the Yukon during the next two or three years, says Schmid. It was considering joint ventures with miners who have placer claims but lack the money to build a plant.

Drill Gang Fingered

MURWILLUMBAH (Reuter) — Thieves believed to be members of the so-called Diamond Drill Gang looted a bank vault of $2.04 million.

They said the theft from the Murwillumbah branch of the Bank of New South Wales resembled other major thefts in which the gang used sophisticated equipment, including a special drill and a medical instrument normally used for examining the inside of bladders.

They broke into the vault of a bank in this coastal city and took used notes which were virtually untraceable, police said.

Employees arriving for work found holes drilled around the lock on the main vault and other signs of a break-in.

Bank officers were unable to open the vault door, which had been jammed, and it took experts using sledgehammers, jackhammers and drills, seven hours to get in.

Howl of Protest Greets Wolf Program

A campaign to stop Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf from approving the spending of close to $500,000 towards shooting and poisoning wolves in northern B.C. is growing on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The Western Canada Chapter of the Sierra Club is sponsoring a public hearing next week in Vancouver to discuss wolf control.

Sierra spokesman Rosemary Fox said a similar meeting may be held in Victoria at a later date.

He is Dr. David Mech, a wildlife research biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Division of Endangered Wildlife Research.

The Citizens Association for Predator Conservation has also has asked its members in Victoria and the island to write Bawlf urging him to defer the program until scientific data has been collected on wolf-caribou relations.

The government program is designed to reduce the wolf population in the Skeena and Ominica regions in an attempt to protect livestock and increase the caribou population.

The save-the-wolf campaign was launched after details of a government memorandum on a wolf control program became known early in October.

The memo revealed in some places more than 60 per cent of the wolf population would be wiped out even though govenrment biologists appear to have inadequate information on which to base the program.

The memo indicates that northern B.C. ranchers lose only one or two per cent of their livestock annually to predators such as wolves and coyotes.

Furthermore, the memo admits there is no proof that wolves are responsible for the decline of cariboo herds.

A spokesman for the CAPC said concerned citizens mistrust the motives of the wolf control program.

"It will be costly to the public and benefit a few," he said.

According to a B.C. wildlife branch memo, most of the wolf killing will be done by placing poison baits that include sodium cyanide, but wolves will also be shot by helicopters.

BENNETT TO OTTAWA

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is heading for next week's first ministers' economic conference in Ottawa with some reservations about the Trudeau government's ability to establish policy.

He reiterated his concern that a government at the end of its mandate is unable to act effectively but the Ottawa discussions on tariffs, quotas and expansion of industry are of vital interest to B.C.

"We'll be outlining not only our concerns for Canada but how B.C. can be better served within the economic framework in this country."

The trip isn't all work for Bennett. He plans to take in Sunday's Grey Cup football game in Toronto.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market shook off a prime rate increase and managed a slight rise in thin post-Thanksgiving trading today.

Analysts said the market took little notice of the news that many major banks had raised their prime lending rates to 11½ per cent from 11 per cent.

And investors got good news from Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, who returned from a tour of the Mideast with a prediction that crude oil prices might not rise as substantially as had been predicted. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets to discuss a price hike next month.

A Boom Year For Fertilizer

EDMONTON (CP) — Domestic fertilizer shipments are booming and over-all Canadian consumption this crop year will likely be greater than the 3,744,000 tons shipped in the year ended June 30, 1978, the president of the Canadian Fertilizer Institute says.

Russell Neal told the 14th annual convention of the Western Canadian Fertilizer Association that in the next five years domestic fertilizer consumption will likely grow by at least 4 to 4.5 per cent annually.

Fertilizer sales in the crop year ended June 30 were about nine per cent more than the previous year's total, he said. About 11,354,000 tons was exported.

In Western Canada, a record 1,736,000 tons was shipped in the year ended June 30. That was an increase of 20 per cent from the 1,389,000 tons shipped in the West in the previous year.

Ontario demand was steady, said Neal. Consumption in the Atlantic provinces and Quebec declined.

Neal said unparalleled demand late last spring severely taxed transportation and production systems in the West.

He said farmers are receiving more cash income this year than last year, see prices of most farm inputs rising, and will likely hedge by buying fertilizer in large quantities in the near future.

No major changes are expected in the domestic fertilizer industry in the coming year, Neal said. But the price of natural gas, used to make ammonia, had increased in Eastern Canada to the point where producers were having trouble meeting U.S. competition.

JET ENGINE PACT SIGNED

PARIS (AP) — The French airplane engine builder SNECMA says it has signed a basic agreement for the Egyptian-based Arab Organization for Yndustrialization (AOI) to start production of its jet turbine engines. The AOI, created to decrease Arab dependence on imported arms, will manufacture the Larzac engine which powers the Franco-West German Alpha-Jet tactical support and training plane. The company said Thursday Arab technicians already are being trained in its factories and will build the engines next year in Cairo.

AUTOMOBILE PRICES CUT

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The price of 1979 model cars and light trucks shipped to dealers on and after Nov. 17 will be cut by an average $175, Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced.

Earlier, General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced plans to reduce its prices an average $170 on cars ordered on or after Nov. 17.

The cuts reflect the reduction in the sales tax on the manufacturing level announced in the Nov. 16 federal budget.

As a result of the lower prices, a two-door Ford Pinto will sell for $96 less, while the saving on a Lincoln Continental two-door sedan will be $266.

Venture Reported

TORONTO (CP) — Ego Resources Ltd. and New Dominion Resources Ltd. have reported a joint venture in their recently-acquired properties consisting of 4,300 acres in the Bathurst area of New Brunswick in which a lead-zinc occurrence has been discovered. The companies said initial geophysical and geochemical surveys have been encouraging and work is continuing.

Alternative Energy Project Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Japan have tentatively agreed on a $10-billion co-operative program to find alternative energy resources, with initial emphasis on fusion energy and coal conversion, it was announced Thursday.

A U.S. energy department statement said the "framework of co-operation" for the 10-year program was reached by delegates from the two countries during a three-day meeting which ended Thursday. An initial meeting was held in Tokyo in September.

The agreement requires final approval from the respective governments.

Aside from fusion energy and coal conversion, the areas of co-operation also would include solar energy conversion, geothermal energy and high energy physics.

Wardair Hopeful

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of Wardair International Ltd., which recently reported a sharp drop in net earnings, said Tuesday that marketing restrictions are responsible for the poor performance.

Max Ward said in an interview from Toronto, however, that recent easing of charter regulations will improve the company's profit position by the end of the year.

The company reported net earnings of $2.9 million for the first nine months of this year compared with $9.2 million for the same 1977 period.

Ward said Canadian transport commission regulation changes that permit mixing of foreign and Canadian traffic on charter flights have proven a boon for Wardair's operations. Further changes permitting multiple stops to fully load aircraft were expected shortly.

U.S. Stocks Called A Better Bet

CALGARY (CP) — A spokesman for a major investment house says the United States' stock market is a better bet than the Canadian market.

Philip Heitner, research director for Nesbitt Thomson Bongard, said the U.S. market is close to its ultimate bottom and can be expected to rise next year, while the Canadian market seems destined to slide.

The Dow Jones industrial average, now hovering around 800, is expected to rise to 935 next year, a Nesbitt research document says, but various factors in the Canadian economy indicate that the Canadian market has reached its peak.

"The market could go down within six months," Heitner told investors at an informal meeting Friday. He said investors should diversify their holdings, redirecting their money into relatively safe investments, though returns may be only 13 to 15 per cent.

Heitner said the days of the 40-per-cent returns are all but over and 15-per-cent returns may be the maximum profits anyone safely can predict in next year's market. But he added that investors must be careful in choosing their investments in 1979.

In past years, 90 per cent of Canadian investments showed some kind of profit but Heitner warned that a weakened market is much riskier. He predicted that only 60 per cent of next year's investments will show profits.

He urged investors to limit their natural resources' holdings and put their money into consumer-oriented companies. Predicting lower inflation rates, he said people will have greater disposable incomes next year and will begin buying appliances, clothing and other luxury items.

Heitner said only soaring food pices are keeping inflation at its present level.

He also urged investors to increase capital goods' holdings because of improved capital spending predictions in this sector. Bank stocks are also a good bet primarily because of increased profits from rising interest rates.

FLYER BUSES FOR SEATTLE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Officials at Flyer Industries Ltd. have confirmed the company has received a $14 million contract to provide buses for Seattle, Wash.

The deal had been rumored for several weeks, and it was known that Flyer was the low bidder.

The contract could signal the beginning of a turnaround for the financially beleaguered firm owned by the Manitoba Development Corp.

Flyer has accumulated a deficit of $15 million and is expected to lose another $1 million in the present fiscal year that ends March 31, 1979.

Before the Judge

A fight between two Sandown Park sulky drivers this summer in a Sidney beer parlor parking lot had its final round in Victoria provincial court Thursday when Judge Blake Allan allowed an assault charge to be dropped.

George Mack Galbraith, 26, of Cloverdale, was charged Oct. 13 with assault causing bodily harm to Sten Einar Erickson, also of Cloverdale, on June 27.

Galbraith pleaded not guilty and a trial date of Jan. 19 was set.

However, lawyer Lyle MacMillan of Cloverdale appeared on behalf of Erickson and asked that the charge be withdrawn because the drivers had reconciled their differences and the "civil aspects" had been settled.

The allegations were that Galbraith and Erickson were in a fight on the Sidney Hotel parking lot the evening of June 27 and that Erickson suffered a broken jaw.

He missed two months of racing following the fight.

Reginald John Green, 4668 Cordova Bay, was ordered to stand trial after a two-day preliminary hearing which ended Wednesday.

Green was charged following a fire-bombing the early morning of Sept. 3 at the Empress Street home of an elderly couple.

Defence lawyer Darryl Woods had earlier elected trial by judge without jury.

Allan warned a 22-year-old that he was running out of chances before suspending sentence and placing him on 15 months probation.

Daniel Mark Cochrane, of 1171 Rockland, was convicted following a trial last Wednesday on charges of possession of three marijuana plants and hashish.

Allan made his remarks after noting that Cochrane had previous convictions for the same offence. Cochrane was convicted of possession of marijuana on July 23 and Sept. 24, 1975, and was fined $75 the first time and $125 on the second occasion.

Defence lawyer Patrick Sweeney asked for leniency because Cochrane wanted to enrol in a blasting course in Trail.

Allan said two things kept Cochrane out of jail this time: plans for the future and his co-operation with probation officers, which was noted in the pre-sentence report.

Allan also ordered that Cochrane not be in possession of any illegal drugs during his probation.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Allen John Ritchie, 45, of 991 Cloverdale, $500; and John Baker, 50, of 726 Daisy, $400.

In addition, Baker was also fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand made by Sidney RCMP.

Absolute Discharge Given Saanich Man

An 18-year-old Saanich man, whom a jury said should be dealt with leniently, was given an absolute discharge in county court Thursday for possession of stolen property.

James Arthur Hannah was convicted by a jury Oct. 31 after the prosecution said a motorcycle valued at between $1,600 and $1,700 was taken by another person April 24 and parts were found in Hannah's home on Maria Road.

Judge Montague Drake said it was obviously a case of mere foolishness and that Hannah had been sufficiently impressed with the consequences of his act by the court proceedings.

Moscow Olympic Coin Program Seeks to Avoid Montreal Errors

Canadians who bought 1976 Olympic coins as an investment have been badly disillusioned, but the man overseeing North American sales of the commemorative coins minted for the 1980 Moscow Olympics says a lesson has been learned from that experience.

Gerald Edge, the Moscow coin program's managing director for North America, says not only will there be far fewer coins issued, but the promotional material carefully avoids any claims as to the investment potential.

Instead, it stresses such things as the esthetic appeal of the coins and the satisfaction of ownership to the private collector.

Edge, who headed the marketing team responsible for home sales in the Canadian Olympic coin program, acknowledged that it received a lot of public criticism.

"We were criticized for flooding the market with too many coins. We struck 1.6 million of the first series and Canadians bought a lot because the promotional program didn't indicate there were more series to come," he said.

As a result, Edge said, the silver coins minted for the Montreal Olympics are barely holding their purchase price in some areas, and some dealers will only buy at face value.

He added: "The medallic art business is not the place to be for investment."

By contrast, the first 40-rouble series of six silver coins minted for the Soviet Games has a worldwide issue of 450,000, with 100,000 in reserve.

Even more limited are the gold coin mintage (130,000, 30,000 reserve) and platinum mintage (40,000, 10,000 reserve). The latter are already virtually sold out in Europe, he said.

The total Moscow offering will consist of a 28-coin silver collection, a six-coin gold collection and — for the first time in the history of Olympic coins — a five-coin platinum collection.

The first series, depicting the Russian cities where Olympic competitions will be staged, has a face value of about $70 and is selling in Vancouver for around $119.

Creation of an international gene bank to save endangered North American plants has been advocated by an authority on the flora of B.C.

"There are many organizations working to save animals from extinction," Dr. Adam Szczawinski said.

"But people tend to forget many plants are also endangered by man-made activities."

Szczawinski, former provincial botanist, was commenting on a report by provincial botanist Dr. Robert Ogilvie that 400 B.C. plants are now classed as endangered or rare.

Gene banks have been created for agricultural crops and one was recently established for flowers at the arboretum of the University of California.

The containers can be kept in storage for hundreds of years.

But Szczawinski said the California gene bank is too narrow in scope.

"What we need is a gene bank for all plants, not just attractive floral species," he said.

Dr. Ogilvie said botanists have been aware for some time of the large number of endangered plants in the province.

"But only three plants — the trillium, dogwood and rhododendrum — are protected by legislation," he said.

He said botanists from the Provincial Museum, the University of Victoria and the University of British Columbia are compiling a list of endangered and rare plants.

"It should be ready by next spring."

Naturalist Nancy Turner, who has written books on native plants, said several native flowers which once grew in the Greater Victoria are now rare or have disappeared.

"Some of these included species of orchids. One known as the ghost orchid seems to have vanished."

She blamed habitat destruction by man as one of the main causes for the dwindling plant world.

PM's Super-Cabinet To Handle Economy

Iona Campagnolo in sports, Jeanne Sauve in communications, Monique Begin in health, Len Marchand in environment, Jack Horner in trade and commerce, Norm Cafik in multiculturalism, Warren Allmand in consumer affairs, Dan MacDonald in veterans' affairs, John Roberts in secretary of state, Marcel Lessard in regional expansion, Jean-Jacques Blais in solicitor-general, Gilles Lamontagne in the post office and Ray Perreault as government leader in the Senate.

The Board of Economic Development will include the ministers of industry, trade and commerce; employment and immigration; regional economic expansion; energy, mines and resources; labor; small business; revenue; and science and technology. The minister of finance and the president of the treasury board will sit as ex officio members of the board.

"The formation of this senior board of economic ministers represents a major change in cabinet organization designed to focus and strengthen efforts to promote Canadian economic development," the official announcement said.

"The new senior economic portfolio and board of economic ministers will consolidate and coordinate present and future policies of 'economic program' departments and will improve delivery of these programs and services to industry."

It said establishement of the new board follows from a series of spending restraint measures announced in August and the shift in priorities towards support for industrial growth.

It said Andras's first task in his new portfolio, officially called president of the board of economic development ministers, will be to review industry in co-operation with business, labor and the provinces.

Andras is to "lead the government's efforts to enhance co-operation and consultation with the provinces as well as the private sector."

Kinnaird Labor Fed President

He told the delegates at one point in the convention that in battling for the construction unions against the former Social Credit government of former premier W. A. C. Bennett, he had shown himself to be as militant as anyone.

However, he said on several other occasions during the convention and in interviews that militancy doesn't just mean "hitting the bricks."

Kinnaird's backers speak of a need for more practical and statesmanlike leadership from the federation in the face of today's complex society and the new demands it is making on labor.

The outgoing executive bore the stamp of Len Guy, who resigned as secretary-treasurer earlier this year. Both he and outgoing president George Johnston adopted a tough-talking, abrasive manner in handling labor-government and labor-management confrontations.

There is a difference in the role of president of the federation this time around in that it will be a full-time job and Kinnaird will be the chief spokesman for the labor party.

USC Sets '78 Target at $3.5M

several communities on Vancouver Island.

On Wednesday Nov. 29 at 8 p.m. in the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel she will hold a public meeting to officially launch the 1978 campaign in this area.

She will present the USC's gold pin award to Ida Weisse, of 666 Wagar Avenue, Victoria, in recognition of her work on behalf of the organization in Canada.

In a four-month period this year, Dr. Hitschmanova travelled 60,000 miles and visited 20 countries, 12 of which receive USC aid.

She reports the situation is worse than ever and her tireless campaign to clothe and feed the world's underprivileged even more of a challenge.

The population explosion, increases in the cost of living, political unrest and crop failures have all combined to cause immense hardship in developing countries, Dr. Hitschmanova said in an interview Thursday.

"In most of these countries conditions are getting worse instead of better," she said.

Viet Nam is the most needy country this year. Six weeks ago the country suffered a dreadful flood that destroyed 70 per cent of its rice crop.

But the situation isn't entirely black.

"We had one very, very beautiful victory."

Korea has become self reliant and will be phased out of the USC program this year. The Korean government has promised to continue all projects initiated by the organization.

The country has been receiving half the USC's total income since 1952.

Last year the USC annual campaign raised $2.8 million, $300,000 more than it hoped. This year the task will be greater, but Dr. Hitschmanova is confident of success.

The USC desperately needs warm practical clothing and soap — a seldom seen luxury in many underdeveloped countries and very important in fighting disease.

The local USC clothing depot is located at Firehall No. 1, 1234 Yates Street. For more information, call 652-2025.

Baffling Suicide Wave Causes Grave Concern

"There seems to be a feeling of hopelessness."

Rodney Carl Antoine, a 20-year-old band member, said many of the young natives don't know where to turn to get help and the few who do are too embarrassed to ask for it.

"A lot are lacking education. They are getting love at home but not enough. Often the family doesn't communicate well enough. Somehow it leads young people to thinking life is not worth living."

Another band member said she has lost three nephews and a niece as well her 16-year-old son in the past month alone.

"It seems I am going to funerals almost every day." The last one, for a nephew, was held Thursday.

The woman said elders in the band have become extremely concerned about their inability to communicate with the young to find out what the root of the problem is.

She added that neither she nor her husband knew their son was depressed.

Elliott said the band is considering installing a crisis telephone line to help troubled band members.

Doyle downplays the significance of alcohol and inadequate housing as possible causes of the over-all problem.

But Antoine believes the use of alcohol is a significant factor.

"So many young people are drinking. I am 20 and I am an alcoholic myself. I finally admitted it and now I go to AA meetings and see an alcohol counsellor."

Antoine said he has been drinking since the age of 15. The problem became so serious his parents were at the point of a nervous breakdown and he had to pull himself together.

He is now regularly employed at a sawmill and is one of the few on the reserve with a steady job.

Meanwhile, Cowichan NDP MLA Barbara Wallace today called on the provincial government to immediately free social services funding for the valley.

She said cutbacks in the human resources ministry led to the closing of the Duncan crisis line and family centre.

Most of the serious problems occur at night so a crisis line must be manned 24 hours a day, Wallace said.

The MLA said the problems in the valley stem from unemployment. Young people can't find work, they get depressed and then turn to drink, she said.

Wallace did not have up-to-date statistics but she said a study two years ago showed 65 per cent of the 16 to 25 year olds, both white and Indian, were unemployed in the valley.

elevator — on the ground floor.

Downstairs in Tiffany's disco, the music stopped for a while and patrons ordered more drinks as they waited.

Other hotels reported back-up systems went into effect when the lights went out.

Moans and groans went up in movie houses when pictures faded from the screens but most patrons took it in good humor and stuck around.

This morning's 10-minute outage occurred over a smaller area of Victoria at 6 a.m. and was attributed to the same transmission fault as Thursday's.

A large number of motorists converged on Mt. Tolmie Thursday night in an effort to see the darkened city from the top, causing a traffic jam police had to sort out.

Many area residents also saw pyrotechnics resulting from circuits blowing. People reported seeing what looked like sheet lightning and fire balls erupting from power installations.

Hydro said these were caused by line disconnects and transformer fuses going out as the system collapsed or came back on.

CB radio club members aided motorists at some intersections by helping direct traffic in the absence of signal lights but police reported no accidents.

Automatic fire and burglar alarms rang all over the city and police and firemen attended many to reset them.

Saanich police arrested two men and recovered drugs apparently stolen during the blackout when a window was smashed at a West Burnside drugstore.

RCMP reported a similar break-in at Sidney Drugs on Beacon Avenue.

October Prices

month's index is that the items included in the government's basket of goods, designed to represent the expenditure patterns of an average household was modified to give food a less important role and housing greater prominence.

However, the index is still designed to show what a typical consumer spends on food, housing, clothing, transportation, health care products, recreation and education and tobacco and alcohol compared with what he would have spent to maintain the same lifestyle in 1971.

The consumer price index for October stood at 179.3 compared with its September level of 177.5, an increase of 1.0 per cent.

This means a typical basket of goods and services which would have cost $100 in 1971, last month cost $179.30.

All items except food were affected by the end of the retail sales tax reductions in six provinces. In most cases this meant a consumer paid three cents more on every dollar spent. The sales tax reductions had been in effect since April.

Another important item in the increases in non-food products was an increase in property taxes of an average 5.6 per cent.

The increase in the food component of the index was attributed mainly to higher prices for beef and pork, a jump in the price of fresh vegetables, many of which were no longer available locally, and higher prices for chicken, milk and sugar.

Food prices increased by 1.2 per cent during the month. All other items in the index increased by 1.0 per cent.

Prices rose in all 15 cities for which the federal agency publishes cost-of-living figures, with increases ranging from 0.4 per cent in Saskatoon to 1.8 per cent in Winnipeg.

There was a wide variation in price movements between cities because not all were affected by the resumption of retail sales taxes and property tax levels vary from one municipality to another.

Changes were:

Vancouver prices (Victoria's are considered to be similar) 0.6 per cent for the month, 7.7 per cent for the year.

Test drive the luxurious 1979 Fiat Brava 2-Litre. Discover the value Fiat offers for around $7,000.*

Fiat is famed for efficient cars—excellent performance, economy, driveability. Now—with the 1979 Brava, Fiat's famous twin cam engine with 2-litre performance is right in the same league with imported cars costing hundreds, even thousands more.

Plush velour interior. Amazingly quiet.

And backed by a unique combination of reliability warranties that hold down the long-term cost of owning your car.

European cars in the 2-litre category have a well-deserved reputation for driver control, ride and sophisticated engineering.

But the prices! Now Fiat engineers introduce a high order of clever engineering, superb ride, lush interior finish with 2-litre power *for around $7,000.

Over the years Fiat engineers have pioneered in squeezing efficiency out of engines for Europe where gasoline prices are sky high. Now the same engineering expertise has been put to work to develop the new Brava 2-Litre: twin overhead cams milk the optimum power from the engine; handling is responsive through rack and pinion steering, McPherson Strut suspension and power assisted brakes. It's all put together with Fiat's skill at getting high performance without costing you an arm and a leg.

Fiat protects the new-car buyer's pocketbook with two remarkable reliability warranties:

1. Fiat was the first import to offer the three-year, corrosion perforation warranty.

2. Two-year (or 40,000 km) power train warranty: Fiat engineers are so sure of the dependability of the Brava engine and drive train, that Fiat has covered them with a warranty for two years (or 40,000 km, whichever comes first).

INSOMNIA 'CURE' WORSE

CHICAGO (AP) — People who have trouble falling asleep will find little remedy from popular sleeping potions, says a report in the Journal of the American Medical Associaton.

In fact, the report says, these potions may worsen the problem and increase daytime drowsiness.

"Fifteen to 20 million Americans suffer from the tyranny of insomnia," said Thomas Coates and Carl Thoresen of the Centre for Educational Research at Stanford University. "Over-the-counter medications, the first line of defence, have little impact on sleep beyond placebo effects.

"Ironically, antihistamines in them can increase daytime drowsiness and may enhance the person's belief that sleepiness is getting worse."

And, say Coates and Thoresen, prescription drugs are little better. The two men also said that after some initial short-term effectiveness, prescription drugs can lead to a cycle of dependence, tolerance and escalating doses, all of which disrupt the person's overall sleeping structure.

Coates and Thoresen said physicians, possibly in collaboration with mental health professionals, may need to teach patients how to relax.

Miners Hit U.K. for 17% Raise

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government's struggle to keep down wages as a way of fighting inflation received a major blow Thursday when the powerful Coalminers' Union demanded pay increases far above the limit the government has set.

The coalminers — the union which brought down a previous Conservative government in a strike over pay — handed in a claim for a 40-per-cent raise.

The Labor government has said it wants all wage increases to be kept to a limit of five per cent and has warned it might take sanctions, such as withdrawing government orders, against companies which give in to higher claims.

The miners' claim was handed to the National Coal Board, the body which governs Britain's nationalized coal mines.

"We do not intend to allow the coal board to be bound by government policy," declared union president Joe Gormley. "Our objective is to get a realistic rate."

The 260,000 miners also want a four-day week, payment for bathing and changing time, compassionate leave at times of bereavement and other improved conditions.

The 57,000 workers at Ford auto plants in Britain ended a nine-week strike Wednesday after receiving an over-all settlement of 17 per cent in one year.

The government and the Trades Union Congress (TUC) last week announced they had failed to reach agreement to keep wages down to the government-proposed five-per-cent limit.

But the TUC said Wednesday it will seek further discussions with the government.

In the previous three years, agreements between the government and TUC held pay raises roughly to the limits. Inflation has dropped dramatically from an annual rate of 27 per cent in 1975 to a current figure of 7.8 per cent.

In 1974, Conservative Premier Edward Heath lost a general election after challenging a coalminers' strike.

SEWAGE LOAN.

ISTANBUL (AP) — The Turkish capital has borrowed $500,000 from the World Bank to upgrade its 500-year-old sewage system, Mayor Aytekin Kotil said, adding that much of the disposal system and sewerage dates to Byzantine rule, which ended in 1453.

FLOODS THREATEN RUSSIAN TREASURES

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Tens of thousands of people are erecting flood barriers around monuments and national treasures in Leningrad after a week of high tides and gales, Izvestia newspaper reported today.

The Neva River rose 1.89 metres (more than six feet) above normal Thursday night and weather forecasters have warned of more high tides to come.

No one has been injured, but damage from flooding and high winds was considerable, Izvestia said.

The low-lying city, founded by emperor Peter the Great at the beginning of the 18th century, has been threatened repeatedly by floods, the worst occurring in 1777, 1824, 1924 and 1955.

Shah's Forces Machine-Gun Protesters

TEHRAN (AP) — Government troops in Shiraz have killed at least 15 protesters and wounded scores of others during three days of demonstrations demanding the ouster of Iran's Shah Mohammed Rezli Pahlavi, sources said today.

One well-placed source in Shiraz said troops fired on protesters with machine guns when they refused to disperse.

The reports came as the shah released 267 political prisoners in Tehran in a bid to defuse the violent opposition which threatens to end his 37-year reign and bring anarchy to this strategic oil-rich nation.

Some of the released prisoners told the Associated Press they had suffered long periods of torture and beating. One said many prisoners held by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, are refusing to be freed "until all our brothers are released."

The government says nearly 3,000 political prisoners have been freed this year. At least 500 remain behind bars, along with several hundred arrested during the turmoil which has swept Iran since January.

The release of political prisoners has been one of the key demands of the shah's opponents who seek his ouster and sweeping political, social and religious reforms.

'Down on Your Knees and Pray'

WASHINGTON — It's time to get on your knees and pray, Hans Mullikin wanted to tell his fellow U.S. citizens.

Dramatizing his plea, he ended a 2,500-kilometre crawl at the gates of the White House.

The president sent word he didn't have time to see him.

Two and a half years ago, the 39-year-old lay Baptist minister had set out on his knees from his East Texas home to "show America that we need to get on our knees and repent."

He had wanted, at the end, to shake Jimmy Carter's hand, to "tell him I'm praying for him."

When an aide told Mullikin the president was too busy to see him, Mullikin smiled and replied that he had "understood from the start that the president was a busy man and couldn't see everyone who came into town."

The journey started outside his Marshall, Texas, home March 1, 1976, when he took to his knees and began pulling a small two-wheeled trailer decked with a U.S. flag along with religious and orange caution flags.

Mullikin's journey occupied his springs and summers. Winters, he returned to his job at a Marshall lumber mill.

At the end of each day's crawl, Mullikin would jog back to his truck to sleep. The next morning, he drove to the previous night's stopping point and resumed the crawl, a pair of well-worn ice hockey goalie pads and 10 layers of extra padding strapped to his knees.

PRAY AMERICA

Full Decade With A New Heart. . .

MARSEILLES — The world's longest living heart transplant survivor celebrates the 10th anniversary of his new heart today.

Emmanuel Vitria, 58, received the heart of a 20-year-old sailor who was killed in a car crash Nov. 27, 1968.

Once confined to a life of rest because of his heart, he now swims, cycles, and goes jogging—all in moderation—to keep fit.

Ironically, the principal surgeon at his operation, Prof. Jacques Henry, has since died from a heart attack.

POSTAL DELAY STALLED DIVORCE

LONDON — Albert Finney and his French actress wife Anouk Aimee, whose divorce was held up by a postal hitch, ended their eight-year marriage Thursday.

Finney, 42, went to court last Thursday but failed to get a divorce then because his wife's consent had not arrived from Paris. But this time the necessary documents had arrived, and Finney was granted the divorce because he and his wife, 47, had lived apart for two years.

The two were married in August 1970.

It Just Doesn't Pay To be a Samaritan

EDMONTON — It wasn't just the mud and the smashed china littering the living room that had Mrs. Leone Harris walking through her house in a daze.

It was the awful realization that she would never again dare open her door to help someone in distress.

When she called out to the stumbling, crying young woman in her front yard, Mrs. Harris had no fear.

But within minutes of opening her door, she knew her offer of help had been a mistake.

"She was crying and talking all the time about somebody," Mrs. Harris said. "I told her to sit down and suddenly she started associating me with her aunt or her mother.

"She got up and attacked me.

"I don't know what happened to the girl to make her do this, except that she was just staggering drunk."

When Mrs. Harris broke free and escaped through the front door, the woman picked up a large potted plant and threw it on the floor.

After going to neighbors to call police, Mrs. Harris returned to her home.

"I looked in through the window and she had dumped over the china cabinet and broken everything in it; she had thrown quarts of milk on the floor and smashed almost every potted plant in the house."

She had also taken off her pants and "made a real mess all over the floor."

City police arrived shortly afterwards and arrested the young woman.

Mrs. Harris's 87-year-old mother managed to sleep through the ruckus and learned of the incident the next morning.

Mrs. Harris says she won't open her door again.

"I don't care if they're laying on the road half-dead. I might call out of the window and I would phone the police."

Surgical Gun The Weapon In Bulgar Brolly Baffler?

LONDON — Bulgarian defector Georgi Markov, victim of London's baffling case of the poisoned umbrella, was killed by a surgical gun used by doctors to inject radioactive pellets under the skin, The Evening Standard reported today.

The assassin hid the implantation gun, of a type used in the treatment of cancer, in the folds of his umbrella and injected a poisoned metal ball into the thigh of the broadcaster and playwright as he waited for a bus in central London, the newspaper said.

Two senior Scotland Yard officers have been in Munich for more than a week interrogating a Bulgarian doctor working in a hospital there. Police believe he is a prime suspect, according to the Standard.

Markov, who defected from Bulgaria in 1970 and was an outspoken critic of its Communist government, died on Sept. 11 in the belief he had been stabbed by a poison-tipped umbrella.

A Prince to Dream On

NEW YORK - The age of liberation notwithstanding, every woman is a Cinderella, dreaming of Prince Charming and all the fringe benefits that would go with him.

That's the word from Harper's Bazaar, which adds such fantasy is therapeutic as well as fun. Accordingly, the December issue of the magazine lists the world's 10 most likely, and available, candidates.

They are: ballet king Mikhail Baryshnikov, screen star Warren Beatty, international jeweller Gianni Bulgari, tennis champ Jimmy Connors, auto tycoon Henry Ford II, baseball superstar Reggie Jackson, movie idol John Travolta, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Iranian ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi and a real prince — Charles of Britain.

Police Knew of Thorpe Rumors

MINEHEAD, England (UPI) — Police and several prominent politicians knew of homosexual allegations made against Jeremy Thorpe when he was leader of the Liberal party, his chief accuser told a court Thursday.

Peter Bessell, a former member of parliament and longtime friend of Thorpe, gave evidence in the preliminary hearing against Thorpe who is charged with incitement and conspiracy to murder Norman Scott, a model who claims he had a homosexual relationship with Thorpe.

Under cross-examinationn, Bessell said the London police commissioner and several prominent politicians including former Home Secretary Sir Frank Soskice, Speaker of the House of Commons George Thomas and David Steel, leader of the Liberal party knew of the homosexual allegations against Thorpe seven years ago.

But he reaffirmed that Thorpe plotted Scott's murder around this time.

"Murder had not been discussed prior to his election as leader of the Liberal party," he said.

"The time when he fully took murder seriously was in the period of December to January 1971," he said under cross-examination.

Thorpe, 49 and regarded as one of the brightest politicians of his generation, headed the small but vocal Liberal party for nine years until 1976 and is still a member of parliament.

The hearing is to decide whether there is enough evidence to commit the defendants to trial and Thorpe has not yet been obliged to enter a formal plea. But in public statements before the case he has vociferously maintained his innocence and has denied having a sexual relationship with Scott.

PM Guilty of Treason - MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is guilty of treason because he has alienated Quebec and divided Canada, Conservative Roch LaSalle told the Commons Thursday.

The MP, Conservative Leader Joe Clark's Quebec lieutenant, said Trudeau tried to convince Canadians he was the only man who could handle Quebec, but during the prime minister's 10 years in power, "disunity has become a permanent fixture in Canada."

The prime minister told the rest of the country he was "in charge of Quebec" and talk of separatism was something drummed up by the media, said LaSalle (Jolliette), one of two Conservative MPs from Quebec.

As the last Quebec provincial election showed, the media were right, he added. The prime minister himself had driven Quebecers away from federalism.

He accused Trudeau of saying a Progressive Conservative victory in a general election would mean the break-up of the country. But no one could have done more than Trudeau to drive his province out of Confederation.

Quebec Liberal cabinet ministers had given Quebecers plenty of reasons to distrust the federal government. He did not elaborate.

Trudeau claimed to want to promote bilingualism, but did away with public service bilingualism bonuses in recent budget cuts, LaSalle shouted at the handful of Liberals in the Commons.

LaSalle made his remarks during the fifth day of a scheduled six-day debate on Finance Minister Jean Chretien's budget brought down Nov. 16.

Montreal Pensioners Win Appeal Entitling Them to UIC

MONTREAL (CP) — Three Montreal-area pensioners all past the age of 65 have won a court appeal entitling them to payments previously denied by the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

In a judgment rendered this week, Federal Court rejected an earlier decision by an arbitrator, saying he had erred in his application of a recent amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The amendment effective Jan. 1, 1976, stipulates that UIC payments should not be started if the applicant is 65 years of age or older.

But the three appellants—two men and a woman—had been getting UIC benefits before 1976 and, in their cases, the payments could and should have been continued, the court ruled.

The arbitrator had ruled that the UIC had no choice but to cut off benefits to the three when they reached 65.

$300M Loan For Que.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government is arranging its second multi-million-dollar loan this fall from an international banking syndicate, a provincial finance department official confirmed Thursday.

He said the loan will be $300 million U.S. but declined to release further details until the necessary agreements are signed.

The Bank of Nova Scotia declined to comment on rumors that it was leading the consortium, while the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce confirmed it was participating. The Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal said they were not not members of the sydicate.

The borrowing will likely be similar to a $500 million loan, signed by Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau in London last September, which Canadian chartered banks were active in arranging.

Just Two Suppliers In Jet Sales Race

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal government went to a shortlist Thursday chosing General Dynamics Corp's F16 and the McDonnell Douglas-Northrop F18a as the only contenders to equip Canadian Forces with aircraft suited for both NORAD and NATO roles.

Defence Minister Barney Danson said the two American fighters were the "finalists" in the fierce competition by six bidders for a $2.3 billion contract.

Danson said Canada will select either General Dyamics' F16 or the McDonnell Douglas-Northrop F18s. "The government ... will not consider a mixed fleet of fighters," he told the House of Commons.

The new fighters would replace the nation's aging fleet of 260 CF101s, CF104s and CF5s.

He said that after "thorough" study Canada has dropped further consideration of Grumman Corp's F14 Tomcat, McDonnell-Douglas Corp's F15 Eagle, Northrop Corp's D18L Cobra and Panavia Aviation's GmbH Tornado.

"Direction has now been given to the interdepartmental program office to initiate dicussions leading to the negotiation of draft contracts with the two prime contractors."

Danson said he expected it would take "several months" before he was able to analyze the draft contracts to determine the benefits to Canada. He said earlier he did not expect to sign any final contract before next summer.

He said the contract would be awarded not only on the capabilities of the aircraft, but on the "best mix of industrial benefits" and employment opportunities offered Canada by the aircraft manufacturers.

The General Accounting Office, an investigatory arm of Congress said this summer the malfunctions of the F16 are an estimated three times higher than the tolerance set in Air Force specifications.

But the GAO said however, the problems did not seem to be any more severe than those experienced in other major systems.

UIC Too Soft, Businessmen Say

OTTAWA (CP) — After days of hearing that new unemployment insurance restrictions will cause terrible hardship, MPs were told by business leaders Thursday that the plans are too soft.

In turn, John Rodriguez (NDP—Nickel Belt) and George Baker (L—Gander Twillingate) told the business leaders off, accusing them of creating unemployment and withholding jobs.

Representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Canadian Construction Association faced some curt remarks after they proposed, in separate briefs, that all workers be required to have 20-week insured jobs before having a right to benefits.

Both groups said seasonal workers, youth, women and other workers they called secondary are getting benefits when they shouldn't be. And both made it clear they feel the system pays people not to work when they can and should work.

Rodriguez put his first question to Frank Burnet, chairman of the CMA's industrial relations committee and vice-president, employee relations, of Inco. Ltd. Inco laid off about 2,500 workers in Rodriguez's constituency last year.

"Just tell me exactly what the CMA has done to create some employment in this country. You have a terrible record," Rodriguez said.

Referring to the Inco layoffs, Burnet replied: "We have no apologies to make for that situation." Later he called Rodriguez "touchy."

"I think the CCA should clean up its act in certain high unemployment areas," Baker told the construction group.

He said in his Newfoundland riding last summer, a $4 million construction project could not go ahead because only one company put in a tendering bid.

"I think it's totally disgraceful for the construction industry to hold up work," Baker said. It would have created 150 jobs.

"I'm rather surprised," replied George Durocher, CCA vice-president.

"Yeah, I was too, right through the summer," Baker shot back.

On a CMA suggestion that insurance benefits be based on family instead of individual income, Gaston Clermont (L—Gatineau) said sexual discrimination might result. What about the principle of equal pay for equal work?

"Here we're talking about equal pay for not working," was Brunet's reply. He suggested secondary earners pay lower premiums and reap lower benefits.

Russell Scrim, the construction association chairman, said students are ripping off the system and that many construction workers work a season, and then perform cash-paid jobs while collecting benefits.

"There was a time when the employer took advantage of the employee. Now it's the other way around," he said.

Questioned by Rodriguez for evidence of student abuse, Scrim when his 23-year-old son lost a job he sat at home waiting for his benefits to run out before "he moved off his ass."

Reminded of the Inco nickel mine workers again, Rodriguez said they "worked so hard they worked themselves out of work."

Both groups also proposed that workers be encouraged to move from their homes to take jobs in other communities. That raised the ire of Fonze Faour (NDP—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe).

"It would mean entirely depopulating my part of the country," said the Newfoundland MP.

Firestone Fights Massive Ripoff

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Firestone Canada Ltd. said customers who return tires in the company's voluntary recall of steel-belted radial 500 and TPC tires will have to answer questions if the tires are not mounted on the cars.

Joe Barbera said the company has planned safeguards to prevent a problem plaguing the U.S. company's recall program. He said some Americans are flocking to automobile scrapyards to get tires designated for recall and are making money by returning them to dealers.

Barbera said serial numbers on the tires will be checked with car dealers to see what make of car the tires were on when first sold. In some cases, proof of purchase will have to be shown, he said.

Tests conducted in the U.S. showed the tires had serious defects which are believed to have been the cause of several accidents.

The recall may involve as many as 600,000 tires produced in 1975 and 1976.

Alta. Oil Profit $1B

EDMONTON (CP) — Cy Mattinson, a consultant with Shell Canada Ltd., says a "very rough" estimate of net profits in the producing sector of the Alberta petroleum industry this year would be $1 billion.

The Canadian Press incorrectly reported Mattinson as saying Tuesday that the Canadian petroleum industry would make a profit of $4.2 billion in 1979 after deduction of income tax, royalties and operating costs. Alberta produces about 85 per cent of Canada's petroleum.

Trudeau Refuses to Name Confederation 'Enemies'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was challenged Thursday to name the premiers he believed to be the enemies of Confederation but he didn't bite.

The challenge came in the Commons from Flora MacDonald, Progressive Conservative constitutional critic, who had interpreted earlier remarks by Finance Minister Jean Chretien as a condemnation of some unnamed premiers for working against national unity.

The prime minister should name the premiers he and Chretien think "are trying to destroy Canada," said Miss MacDonald (Kingston and The Islands).

Trudeau was not familiar with Chretien's remarks, which were made at a luncheon Tuesday with reporters, but said some views of the premiers "was not conducive to the kind of Canada we want."

Trudeau referred specifically to the premiers' reluctance to negotiate constitutional reform in the same manner he wants.

Trudeau and the 10 premiers meet here Monday and Tuesday to chart a course for major economic reform.

Just as Trudeau appeared ready to state categorically exactly what he felt about the premiers, Conservative Leader Joe Clark began heckling him.

Trudeau stopped talking and then said of Clark, "he should show the self-discipline he asks of his colleagues."

That remark was a reference to orders from Clark to his MPs that they should be less rowdy in the Commons so television viewers get a better impression of them.

MPs from all parties roared with laughter when Trudeau then said:

"I understand this is Mickey Mouse's week and I want him (Clark) to take over."

Clark immediately rose to say he is prepared to take over just as soon as Trudeau will call a federal election.

Blais Doesn't Trust Judge Tory Critics Charge

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs Thursday accused Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais of not trusting judges.

An Ontario provincial court judge should be allowed to determine whether release of 548 RCMP documents would harm national security, the MPs told Blais in the commons.

Blais used a section of the Federal Court Act Monday to block production of the documents at the Toronto trial of the Toronto Sun on charges under the Official Secrets Act.

The government also objected to production of some 16,500 documents under another section of the Federal Court Act which allows the judge to read them and decide whether they should be admitted as evidence.

Conservative Justice Critic Eldon Woolliams said the documents are crucial in determining the guilt or innocence of the newspaper, its publisher Douglas Creighton, and editor Peter Worthington.

Blais said he refused to let even the judge see the 548 documents because they contain information gathered by intelligence services in other counties.

Paperwork Trimmed

OTTAWA (CP) — Another victory in the battle against the government-imposed paper burden on small businesses was announced Thursday by Statistics Canada.

The agency said in a statement it will stop requiring a wide variety of small businesses to provide statistical reports.

Spokesmen for small business have pleaded with governments for years to reduce the the load of forms and questionnaires demanded by governments.

Postal Automation Mistake - Inventor

TORONTO (CP) — Automated, computerized mail sorting systems used by the post office represent technological overkill, the man who invented the systems says.

Arthur Porter, an engineering professor at University of Toronto, says the machines were designed to solve a short-term problem—rapid turnover of poorly paid mail sorters during the 1950s—but created a worse problem instead.

"Perhaps the best answer might have been to pay the workers more and involve them more in decision-making," Porter, 67, said in a recent interview. He now is chairman of the Ontario royal commission into electric power planning.

He said that since the post office began its $1-billion automation program, postal workers have been forced to work with and compete with machines.

On a contract with the post office 24 years ago, Porter directed a team of researchers to develop a fast, computerized mail coding and sorting system.

"Now I know the post office is not as efficient today as it was before."

He said the Volvo car plant in Sweden is "a more humane approach."

Indian Affairs '77 Spending 'Ran Wild'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Indian affairs department could have gone bankrupt last year because it operated with an inadequate financial control system, R. D. Brown, assistant deputy-minister said Thursday.

"It's theoretically possible it could have happened," Brown said following an Indian affairs committee meeting.

Brown told Progressive Conservative Robert Briscoe (Kootenay West) that Saskatchewan department officials overspent by $14 million in 1977 because there was "a management group in place unable to control it (spending)."

Brown assured Briscoe that there were no cases of theft or fraud uncovered by a subsequent department investigation.

But he said the department was lucky that other regional management groups stayed within or close to budget because there was "no system of checks and balances."

"The same circumstances existed in all other provinces,".

The net result was that regional officers in Saskatchewan did not adequately anticipate the total cost of programs, he said.

Brown said the budget control system required regional directors-general to report deficits or surpluses twice a year.

"The onus was on the regional director and it was six months before we knew there was a deficit," Brown said. "There was no early warning system."

Administrators did not have the necessary statistics to do the job properly, he said.

Brown also blamed "the militant or semi-militant Indian association" which encouraged local bands to spend money. Social assistance payments to the provinces were also increased because Indians moved into the cities, he said.

The regional director and several financial officers were replaced by a new computer system.

"Now we can tell what each region is doing and the computer is programmed so that it can't go above it's budget," Brown said.

Baby Bonus Cut Pinches Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian families on welfare will receive smaller family allowance payments early next year but haven't been told how to reclaim the money under new taxation measures, an Indian affairs committee was told Thursday.

"In January we will be plagued by phone calls asking why the cheques are smaller," said Smith, Progressive Conservative MP for Churchill.

Smith was referring to legislation which will reduce the family allowance Jan. 1 to $20 a month for each child from $28 and provide a $200-a-child tax credit for parents earning less than $18,000 a year.

"Is the Indian affairs department assisting in publicizing the program?" he asked Arthur Kroeger, Indian affairs deputy minister.

Smith expressed concern about thousands of Indians living on reserves and receiving federal welfare. Their incomes will be cut and the tax credit will not apply until income tax time.

"We are talking about families living to the last dollar every month," Smith said. "Unemployed people need the additional money badly."

The federal government wants Indian women collecting family allowance payments to fill in a form early next year to indicate whether the tax benefit should be paid in a lump sum or proportionally from April to December.

Horner Cool On Car Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jack Horner displayed a lukewarm attitude Thursday toward a report saying Canada should seek to expand its automotive industry.

"It doesn't help us much on the question of how to get more plants in Canada," the minister said of the 250-page report of Simon Reisman.

Reisman, who had spent four months on the report, commented later that the minister's remark disappointed him.

"I'd be very surprised if he said that and I think he ought to study the report more carefully," he told reporters.

Reisman reported that there should be no attempt at present to seek to renegotiate the Canada-United States auto pact and instead efforts should be made to expand the industry in Canada, particularly the auto parts sector which is not covered by the pact.

Horner also said that General Motors now is "looking at a number of sites in Canada for a number of plants."

Ford was considering building a new foundry. He was optimistic on both counts and expected a decision from Ford before the end of the year and General Motors in the New Year. GM has been known to be considering a plant in Quebec and the federal and provincial governments have offered assistance.

Horner went along with one part of the Reisman report, saying there should be an end to the subsidy war in which millions of dollars are offered to auto makers to locate plants in certain areas.

But the minister said the federal government is simply matching the efforts of various states across the border. Canada was concentrating its efforts to end the war through multilateral trade negotiations in Geneva.

Cloning Of Cattle Research Under Way

REGINA (CP) — Cloning cattle to produce identical versions of highly efficient animals is only one of several areas where the beef industry needs to do research, C. M. Williams of the University of Saskatchewan, said Thursday.

His comments echoed Elmer Menzie of the University of Guelph, who told the seminar no other industry treats its market with such contempt as does beef in terms of research.

Williams and Harvey Trimble, a pure-breed breeder from Okotoks, Alta., both mentioned cloning.

Trimble described it as a process of embryo splitting — separating the cells of an embryo, putting them into a membrane in which an embryo grows and planting that in a host cow.

The process, he said, could produce "identical cattle, one after another after another."

Beef Men Rap Allmand

REGINA (CP) — A two-day national beef seminar concluded Thursday with criticism of federal government policies in general and Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand in particular.

Allmand, who addressed the gathering of cattlemen, meat packers and government officials Wednesday, suggested a ceiling for beef prices, more beef imports and greater use of fish and poultry as a source of protein for Canadians.

As the conference concluded, seminar speakers recalled Allmand's remarks while criticizing federal policies.

Gordon Burton, a rancher and director of Burns Foods Ltd., said one reason the federal Liberal government was making so many blunders was because it had been in power for so long.

Burton said he hopes that regardless of which party assumes power the beef industry can get some consistency of policy. Changing the rules of the game almost daily does not offer the industry any stability.

Several speakers at the conference, sponsored by the Canadian Cattlemen's Association and the Meat Packers Council of Canada, called on government to leave the beef industry alone and let market forces work.

Many referred to goverment advice to increase cattle herds in 1972, just before prices nose-dived.

Harold Dodds, the editor of Cattlemen Magazine, spoke of Allmand's unfortunate performance and said the minister had given co-operation between his department and the beef industry a setback. Cattle producers have the right to expect both an informed and considered approach from their federal government, he said.

Deadly Drug Big Seller

TORONTO (CP) — Between five and 10 million capsules of the pain-killing drug Darvon are sold annually in Canada,

Colin Burrell, a spokesman for Eli Lilly and Company of Canada Ltd. said in an interview Wednesday that the drug, which contains propoxyphene, is safe if taken in recommended doses.

However, the pain killer has been called the deadliest prescription drug in the United States by Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of a Ralph Nader medical study group.

Forces' Flabbies Fight for Fitness

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The green uniforms of the Canadian armed forces are no guarantee their wearers are in the pink of condition.

But the Life Quality Improvement Program being pushed at CFB Esquimalt under the supervision of regional surgeon Col. Colin Yelland is designed to transform flab into fitness.

While infantrymen through their physical demands have a better chance of staying fit, Yelland says desk workers generally are no different than their civilian counterparts.

Sailors at sea are particularly hard put to get enough exercise.

He likens LQIP to the federal government's Participaction program.

In conjunction with LQIP, a team from the Defence and Civil Institute of Environment Medicine in Toronto, headed by Kurt Allen, is here to assess the physical condition of personnel at CFB Esquimalt and CFB Comox.

While the institute concentrates on the armed forces, Allen says private industry can also use the institute's services under contract. The Toronto fire department is one of their clients.

Research at the institute allows the team to carry out tests and compile results and recommendations on the spot with the use of a mini-computer.

Members of the base's physical education and recreation staff are assisting the team, gaining knowledge that will help them lay out programs that will lead to better all-round health.

While individuals can voluntarily be examined by the team, Allen says it is better for personnel to come forward as a unit, thereby exposing the unconverted — as well as the converted — to the program.

Cmdr. John Anderson, captain of the destroyer HMCS Restigouche, volunteered his entire ship's company for examination.

Anderson became enthusiastic about LQIP after researching physical fitness in the armed forces for an essay he wrote while at the forces' staff college in Toronto.

"It's difficult to set patterns of exercise aboard ship when the day rotates in watches. There is no chance of having some fixed time period," he says.

An entire squadron will be immersed in the LQIP when the team visits Comox.

After examination, personnel are given individual programs geared to help them reach their objectives.

As an example, an officer in Yelland's department has been on his own program for three weeks, trying to lose weight and improve his general health. He does exercises daily, as well as aerobics to increase his lung capacity, he walks, jogs and runs . . . and swims for a "cooling-off process."

The program also includes periodic testing.

He's convinced his LQIP is working and says his new way of life will be a lifetime thing.

Rounding out LQIP is the Base Alcoholic Rehabilitation System, an obesity clinic that was started in April. An anti-smoking clinic also is being considered.

The Esquimalt base is well in the forefront of the LQIP movement.

"The commander (Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander, maritime command Pacific) became aware of it and says he will insist the level of fitness be maintained," Yelland said.

The admiral was one of the first to go through the LQIP team's testing.

Yelland says LQIP packages are being considered for use at the recruitment level, as well as for servicemen and women heading for civvy street on retirement.

The pursuit of health, Yelland contends, is as challenging as a shooting war.

"It will always be with us. We never will be able to let our guard down."

While it's still up to the individual, Yelland and others involved in the LQIP program are working toward their goal — convincing armed forces personnel that fighting fit is something more than just a phrase.

Hospital Budgets Face Curb

Reaction was cautious here today to Health Minister Bob McClelland's plan to impose a five-per-cent increase limit on next year's budgets for B.C. hospitals.

"It's a little fuzzy now to give a real succint answer," Jim Fair, executive director of the Victoria General Hospital, said.

He said it is difficult to know whether the ceiling is a rigid decision or one that will have some flexibility to take care of increasing workloads, such as in the field of nuclear medicine, which is increasing between 30 and 50 per cent a year.

Fair agreed "every effort should be made to contain costs as much as possible" but he said this would be difficult if collective agreements for hospital employees exceeded the ceiling.

He said the ceiling is in line with other areas of Canada. In Manitoba and Ontario, he said, staff numbers have had to be cut to meet ceilings. He said the ceiling increase in Manitoba was about 3.2 per cent and in Ontario 4½ per cent.

Dr. A.C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, was unavailable for comment.

In a letter to hospital directors, McClelland said, as a one-time measure, special consideration will be given to hospitals with cash flow problems resulting from fiscal controls this year.

Leo Donaghue, president of the B.C. Health Association, says his group appreciates the basic need for cost restraints. He said the group will conduct a survey among the 110 acute care hospitals in the province before responding to McClelland's ceiling.

Donaghue said the survey will ask which hospitals are receiving special consideration from the government and the anticipated effect of the ceiling.

Bus Sale Protest Studied

Victoria city council may protest the recent sale of the Gray Line Sightseeing bus operation to an American company.

The matter was raised at a council meeting Thursday night when Ald. Robin Blencoe proposed that council make a submission to the Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA) expressing concern.

Blencoe agreed to delay his motion for two weeks when Mayor Mike Young said the city should get a full explanation of the sale from the provincial government before launching any objection.

"It should be a genuine concern of the city and not a politically inspired action," said Young.

Young said he is concerned because the bus line had been sold to Gray Line of Seattle Inc.

Daon Gets Housing Go-Ahead

A Daon Development Corp. housing proposal that's been kicked around city hall for months finally won approval Thursday by a 5-4 vote.

The eight aldermen on council split down the middle over the proposal which would see 23 single-family units built on a one-and-a-half acre site at Boyd and Luxton.

Mayor Mike Young decided the matter with a tie-breaking vote.

When the project first came before council six weeks ago it was rejected as incompatible with the neighborhood. Ald. Larry Ryan revived the issue, however, saying there was a desperate need for jobs.

The Daon proposition came before council a number of times before it was rejected again at a special meeting last Monday, but because Ald. Bob Wright wasn't in attendance Young opted to bring the matter back again.

Meeting in the James Bay Community Centre at 140 Oswego, council members repeated their often-heard arguments.

Some council members said the development is too dense while others said it is adequate and perhaps a better proposal than could have been hoped for.

Wright, speaking in support of the Daon bid, said: "It's a good use of the land and a good community use of the land."

Mayor Young agreed, adding that "I remember when (the site) was zoned highrise, and over the years I've seen it brought down to the point where we're arguing about what type of single-family dwelling is appropriate."

The audience of about 100 loudly applauded Ald. Bill McElroy when he said the project is too dense and doesn't provide enough open space for children to play.

But the crowd's mood was dampened a minute later when Ald. John Hayes said council should not be swayed by the fact the majority of people attending was against the development.

"I realize the audience is against it and so I would like to support if for political reasons if nothing else . . . there would be nothing easier than to agree with you people here tonight — but we must face the facts."

New Award Eyed To Prod the Profs

A University of Victoria senate committee is considering an outstanding teacher award to motivate professors to improve their classroom performances.

"Establishing awards for excellence in the classroom might encourage people to improve their teaching," said Dr. Rod Symington, the professor who made the suggestion to senate.

Symington said Thursday the award concept is used by the University of B.C. and several other universities.

UBC gives a cash award of $2,500, but UVic would not offer any money if the idea is approved.

Symington believes the concept shouldn't be tarnished by monetary reward because the university will face enough problems just trying to get it established.

"There's bound to be controversy about this kind of thing," he said.

Symington said he would be happy if senate endorsed the concept before the end of the school year.

The award should improve the balance between teaching and research, he said.

Teaching and research are a university professor's two main activities, but research and pulication are the only means of gaining promotion and recognition.

"Publication takes precedence, but the two areas should be balanced," Symington said.

He said the system has a generally detrimental effect on teaching quality.

Most university teachers fall into the average-to-good category. Only about five per cent could be classified as poor and about five per cent are excellent, he estimated.

Symington said he wants to see more excellence in the classroom.

He was supported by Alma Mater Society (AMS) president Dave Connell, who said establishing a teaching award "couldn't hurt."

Connell said most UVic professors ranked from fair to very good in a recent evaluation by the AMS.

He agreed teachers are judged too much on research and not enough on classroom performance.

"Teaching doesn't seem to have such a high priority in terms of reward," Connell said.

According to Symington, it's easy for a poor or mediocre performer in the lecture hall who does a lot of research work to advance in the university hierarchy.

But an excellent teacher who does little research doesn't stand much of a chance of promotion, Syminton said.

Cut Accepted By Musicians

The money-short Victoria Symphony Orchestra will finish the season after members of the orchestra voted 44-10 Thursday night to accept a 25-per-cent pay cut.

The agreement means their weekly pay will dip to $175 a week from $250 a week.

Two musicians abstained from voting on the pay proposal, offered by the symphony society as one way of keeping the orchestra going.

But some of the members of the orchestra were unhappy over the cut and there are reports some may quit and head elsewhere.

The reduced pay pact covers the first year of a three-year contract and the musicians were told that if necessary, the second and third years will also be renegotiated if the orchestra's financial problems warrant this.

Society president Dorothy Frost said the cuts had to be made as part of an effort to stave off what she called "imminent bankruptcy".

Some of the musicians, although they voted for the pay cut, were nevertheless unhappy.

They said it was made clear to them they could accept reduced salaries or nothing at all.

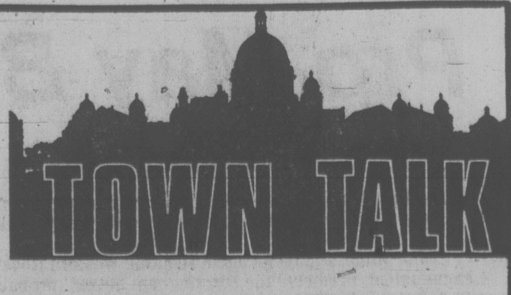
ARSON CHECK

Samples taken from fire debris at a Menzies Street apartment Wednesday night are being tested at a police crime lab for evidence of arson.

Victoria fire deputy Mike Heppell said today investigators are examining the possibility that a fire accelerant was used in a $150,000 blaze that swept two apartments at 101 Menzies and damaged an adjoining building.

He said the fire apparently started at the exterior of the apartment house in the area of a rear porch and stairs.

84% of Students Drinking



A survey by three University of Victoria students reveals 84 per cent of students between the ages of 12 and 19 consume alcohol at least once a month.

Drinking by 600 students who completed the anonymous questionnaire ranged from one to four times a month.

Male students drink only slightly more than females, the 18-month survey determined.

And the earlier in life students start drinking, the more they consume later on and it shows up in their school performance.

The survey was undertaken by UVic's psychology department and funded by the federal health and welfare ministry.

Official survey results will be sent to Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts.

The lights went out about 60 minutes too soon on The Marriage of Figaro at the Royal Theatre Thursday.

The final act takes place in a night-shrouded garden with characters bumping into each other amid a rash of mistaken identities. A power failure at that point would have at least provided atmosphere for the actors.

But the blackout came midway in the second act and as the orchestra faltered, conductor Timothy Vernon lowered his baton and the curtains closed.

When the lights came on actors and audience picked up where they had left off.

"It All Happens in James Bay" said a poster welcoming city council to the community centre for a meeting Thursday night.

How true.

Not only did all the lights go out, but the sound system was a fizzle right from the start.

But that didn't stop the city's elected officials from forging ahead, with Mayor Mike Young explaining that his aldermen are used to being in the dark "and it's more romantic this way."

Only real hitch came when soft spoken Ald. John Hayes rose to make a few points and people at the back began shouting they couldn't hear a word.

"Can you hear me now?" asked the alderman, raising his voice slightly.

"No!" came the reply.

"Just get up and speak like you did when you were campaigning," offered C. Joe Richards, a perennial observer at council affairs.

That wasn't Richards' only good line of the evening. When speaking in favor of a down-zoning proposal he coined an expression that has to rank as a true Canadianism.

"You have to stickhandle your car down Rithet Street because of the parking problem," he said.

Flim-Flam Flame

A little bit of behind-the-scenes engineering made sure the start of natural gas production from the Grizzly Valley fields was a flaming success.

Premier Bill Bennett was to throw a switch at Chetwynd earlier this week to get things rolling and part of the show was to be a whoosh of burn-off flame that would tower skywards as things came on stream.

While Bennett was ready, the equipment wasn't. But organizers undaunted, had engineers hook up a gas line to a small gas tank and when everyone was set, a pipeline workers snuck over to the tank, opened a valve and up went the flame as planned.

Victoria Rotary club president Jack Gregory says a bid has been made to host the world Rotary golf tournament in the near future.

"There is a good chance we will get this in 1981 or 1982," he said.

Decision will be made at next year's tournament at Pebble Beach, California. The 1978 tourney was held in South Africa.

An ultra-bright Victoria high school student has won a whopper of a scholarship to McGill University.

The honor's an all-in-the-family sort of thing.

Ann's following in the footsteps of her sister, who won the same scholarship in 1976 and a brother who received a similar award offered by Queens University.

Being a minority on campus can be lonely, so older students at the University of Victoria are banding together to form their own exclusive club.

More than 50 students showed up recently at the first meeting of the "mature students" club. Membership is reserved for students over 21.

The club will plan social and sporting events for older students and also deal with academic problems.

Pat Kelly A Casualty Of Beating

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks whipped Colorado 7-2 Thursday and it cost coach Pat Kelly of the Rockies his job.

Kelly, who took over as coach of the young Rockies last season and led them to their first National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoff berth, was fired following the game at Denver.

It was the Rockies' second straight defeat and left the team with a 3-14-3 season record.

Kelly, 43, and in his 15th season as a hockey coach, was unavailable for comment.

Aldo Guidolin, director of player personnel for Colorado and a former NHL player will succeed Kelly, according to reports in Denver.

Rockies officials declined comment on the matter but manager Ray Miron was reported to have confirmed the choice of Guidolin, 46.

Guidolin has served as an unofficial assistant coach at practices in training camp and on a spot basis during the last three seasons. Besides an extended playing career, Guidolin has coached in the American League.

Meanwhile, Bill Derlago of the Canucks did his best to prove to the Canucks were wise in making him their top pick in last year's amateur draft.

The Birtle, Man., native was sent down to Dallas Black Hawks of the Central League after only six games. But he's now back with the parent club and the former Brandon Wheat Kings junior continued to impress — scoring two goals and adding an assist in the rout of Colorado.

It was Derlago's second game and second and third goals since being recalled.

"Derlago lost about 12 pounds when he was sent to the minors and I think he's better for being being sent down," said Canuck coach Harry Neale, admitting that had Vancouver not run into a rash of injuries, the 20-year-old would still be with Dallas.

Vancouver goaltender Glen Hanlon kept Canucks in the game during the first period as the Rockies outshot them 18-5, but managed only a goal by Dennis Owchar.

Vancouver broke the game open with five unanswered goals in the final period, beginning with Dennis Ververgaert's goal at 2:55 and continuing 23 seconds later with Chris Oddleifson scoring.

Ron Sedlbauer, Thomas Gradin and Dennis Kearns scored Vancouver's other goals while former Victoria Cougar Curt Fraser played a strong game and picked up three assists.

In other NHL games, Montreal Canadiens defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 8-4 and Boston Bruins defeated Buffalo Sabres 5-2.

In World Hockey Association action, Cincinnati Stingers downed Birmingham Bulls 4-3, while Winnipeg Jets dumped Indianapolis Racers 5-1.

(Summaries on page 26).

The Boston victory moved the Bruins two points ahead of idle Toronto Maple Leafs and six in front of Buffalo in the Adams Division.

Jacques Lemaire scored twice within 14 seconds midway through the first period as the Canadiens erupted for six opening-period goals en route to their rout of Pittsburgh. Lemaire also had two assists.

In WHA action, the Stingers—paced by Robbie Ftorek's two-goal effort in the first period—moved two points ahead of idle New England and into sole possession of first place.

Kent Nilsson scored two goals to lead Winnipeg past Indianapolis, which dropped its 12th game in 16 starts this season. The Racers, who have just two wins and a pair of ties, now have lost six in a row and are winless in their last eight games.

Longmore Rink Alive In Totem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven rinks remain undefeated heading into today's action in the 24th annual Pacific Coast Curling Association Totem Bonspiel.

In Thursday's play, Rolfe McCartney of Seattle upset Dr. Ken Neuman of Vancouver 5-2, Bart Longmore of Victoria defeated Trev Fisher of New Westminster 7-4, and veteran Glen Harper of Duncan stopped Mel Futa of Port Hardy, 7-2.

The other undefeated rinks are Jack Finnbogason, Roy Vinthers and Glen Pierce, all of Vancouver, and Craig MacLeod of Richmond.

CALGARY (CP) — Ron Mills of Saskatoon skipped his rink to a 6-5 victory over defending Canadian champion Ed Lukowich Thursday to qualify for the championship round of the $35,000 Calgary Curling Classic.

In the other "A" final, Doug Wankel's rink from Elbow, Sask., qualified for the Saturday final by defeating Tony Eberts of Kamloops 5-3.

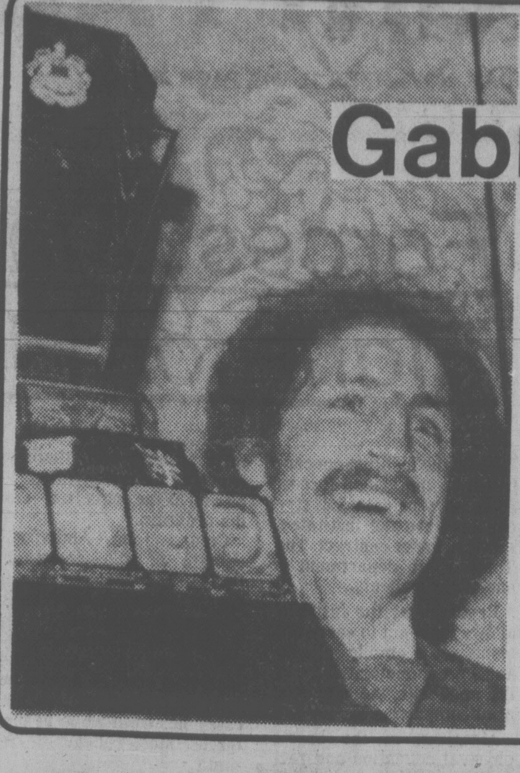
Earlier Thursday, Mills edged Doug Baird of Calgary 6-5 and Wankel recorded an 8-2 victory over the current world junior champion, Paul Gowsell of Calgary.

In B event play, defending Classic champion Rick Folk of Saskatoon remained alive with two wins, defeating Steve Skillings of Victoria 7-6 and Greg Balderston of Saskatoon 7-4.

In C event play, defending British Columbia champion Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver was sidelined by Jim McCullough of Calgary 7-5.

FENNELL, POPLAWSKI, COODE OTHER WINNERS

Gabriel Gets Double Award



TORONTO (CP) — Tony Gabriel had been up on the podium so often, winning speeches were becoming a matter of course. This time, he was prepared for the worst with two losing addresses ready.

The standout tight end with Ottawa Rough Riders was fully expecting the bubble to burst. After all, how long could his good fortune hold—three previous outstanding Canadian awards in four years.

Instead, the seven-year veteran was a double winner—outstanding Canadian for the third time in a row and fourth time in five years and most valuable player for the first time.

It marked the first time since 1969, when another Ottawa standout, quarterback Russ Jackson, was awarded double honors—being selected the outstanding Canadian and most valuable player.

The leading pass receiver in the Eastern Conference this season—and for with the fifth straight year—with 67 catches and 1,070 yards, Gabriel was selected by the Football Reporters of Canada ahead of Edmonton Eskimos quarterback Tom Wilkinson in the MVP voting.

He was named outstanding Canadian for a fourth time in a matchup with rookie award winner Joe Poplawski of Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Other award winners were:

Outstanding defensive player—Edmonton tackle Dave Fennell, the home-grown leader of the Eskimos' BONE (Brotherhood Of Nasty Eskimos) defence and known among his peers as Dr. Death, over Montreal's punt return specialist and defensive back, Randy Rhino.

Outstanding offensive lineman—Ottawa tackle Jim Coode, selected over the 1977 winner and 1976 runner-up, centre Al Wilson of British Columbia Lions.

Poplawski, a 21-year-old flanker, caught 75 passes—tops in the league for 1978—for 998 yards and his selection over the Eastern nominee, Hamilton Tiger-Cats linebacker Ben Zambiasi, came as no surprise.

It was the first time a Canadian has won the rookie award since it was instituted seven years ago.

Fennell, a rugged six-foot-four and 249 pounds, is the spiritual leader of Edmonton's BONE defence.

The 25-year-old homebrew and Edmonton's top pick in the 1973 Canadian college draft, said he's had difficulty keeping the awards and the game in perspective.

"This (the awards night) is really only a sideline. It's what happens on the field Sunday that counts," said Fennell. "I've got to watch myself because when you get too carried away by the activities you can get away from the established routine."

Canadiens Being Pushy

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvan Cournoyer, one of the scoring sparkplugs of Montreal Canadiens for almost 15 years, says the National Hockey League team tried to push him into retirement before the current season even though he had a year left on his contract.

Cournoyer, suffering recurring pain from a two-year-old back problem, missed Canadiens' game in Pittsburgh Wednesday and there is some doubt whether he can continue his career.

The tea captain underwent major back surgery in the spring of 1977, but made a successful comeback to help the Canadiens to another Stanley Cup triumph last season.

Cournoyer said today that Montreal vice-president Jean Beliveau, himself a former Canadiens captain, broached retirement with him during training camp.

"He tried to tell me that the Canadiens have several right wingers and maybe it was time to give way to one of the younger players," saidCournoyer, who turned 35 Wednesday.

Beliveau offered him full pay for the remaining year on his contract plus compensation equal to an additional season if he retired, the right winger said.

"I felt that I was still capable of helping this team, and was really disappointed that they asked me to do such a thing," he said, adding that the entire episode left him thoroughly disgusted with team management.

"Even if they offered me the same deal today, knowing what I know about my state of health, I would turn them down. I still think I can help the Canadiens."

The Drummonville, Que., native is taking whirlpool and cortisone treatment for his back, and says he might return shortly.

For his part, Beliveau says the offer wasn't meant as an insult, and that he wouldn't have made it if he thought Cournoyer would take it that way.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Manchester City jumped to a 2-0 lead and then held a furious comeback attempt by Milan, managing a 2-2 tie with the Italian team in the UEFA Cup soccer tourney Thursday.

Despite the draw, Manchester City improved its chances of moving into the quarter-finals. The return game will be in Manchester on Dec. 6.

TORONTO IS NEVER FRIENDLY

Then There's The Weather!

TORONTO (CP) — The outlook for Sunday's Grey Cup finale looks bleak—windy and cold with some snow flurries—but by comparison to some Canadian Football League showdowns of recent years, field conditions should be ideal.

Although no unseasonal weather is in the immediate forecast—Environment Canada calls for partly cloudy skies today and Saturday with temperatures ranging from freezing to plus-6 Celsius for both days—Gord Walker Jr. isn't letting the possibility of a dramatic change elude him.

The Exhibition Stadium manager has only to recall last year's Ice Bowl at the Olympic Stadium in Montreal to prepare him to expect the unexpectable.

All was in readiness for the 1977 game between Edmonton Eskimos and Montreal Alouettes—the same two adversaries who will decide Sunday's championship game—when a foot of snow fell on the Olympic oval.

Early next morning, before the work crews could get to work, hundreds of halftime show entertainers tramped across the field and before the snow removal people had moved in the damage was done.

While Walker might be gearing his groundsmen to prepare for any eventuality, the fact remains Toronto weather has never been considered friendly.

In 1950, Varsity Stadium was a sea of mud and water from the outset and players were undistiguishable after the opening whistle as Toronto Argonauts defeated Winnipeg Blue Bombers 13-0 in what has been affectionately called the Mud Bowl.

The 1962 Grey Cup game stretched over two days when billowing fog rolled in off Lake Ontario and settled on Exhibition Stadium, making it impossible to follow the play any higher than a few feet above ground level. Winnipeg edged Hamilton Tiger-Cats 28-27 in what came to be known as the Fog Bowl when play was suspended in the last 10 minutes and the game completed the following day.

Then there was the Wind Bowl in 1965 when any kick into the wind more than 20 feet off the ground was doomed to wind up in close proximity of the line of scrimmage.

The Sod Bowl of 1970 saw great chunks of divot displaced whenever players from either Montreal Alouettes or Calgary Stampeders made sudden moves in any direction.

One of the wettest games in recent memory was the 1974 Grey Cup game at Vancouver's Empire Stadium when the combatants and some 34,500 fans shivered through a torrential downpour.

The coldest finale was in Toronto in 1926 with the temperature at minus-13 Celsius (nine fahrenheit) while the warmest weather was also recorded here, 14 Celsius (58 fahrenheit) for the 1941 game.

Otherwise, Grey Cup fever hasn't heated up yet.

The subdued atmosphere may be a result of a warning issued by police last week that liquor laws would be strictly enforced outside downtown hotels and during the parade.

Unfortunately, the Grey Cup contestants—Edmonton Eskimos and Montreal Alouettes—have done little to enliven the week's preparations.

Both clubs have been deadly serious about their preparations for Sunday's game, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. EST at Exhibition Stadium.

Edmonton head coach Hugh Campbell praised the Montreal team spirit.

"They have great esprit-de-corp," he said. "They seem to be able to suck 'em up when things get tough."

Joe Scanella, head coach of the Als, drew more interest when he said he has a private pre-game ritual. But he refused to give details.

"I have some things I do just before a game, but I'm not saying what they are. It's too ridiculous. I just won't say."

Both clubs are virtually injury free.

VICTORIA PRO FALTERS

DUNEDIN, N.Z. (CP-Reuter) — Roger Klatt of St. Albert, Alta., fired a supurb 65 today to climb within a stroke of the leader after two rounds of the Otago Charity golf tournament.

Mike Krantz of the United States fired his second straight 68 to stay alone at the top with a 36-holes score of 136 after sharing the first day's lead with three other players, including John Morgan of Victoria.

Morgan slipped from contention when he blew to a 76 Friday and 144 total. Kelly Roberts of London, Ont., had a 75 for 149 while Gar Hamilton of Toronto was 78—152 and Bob Beauchemin of Victoria, 76—154.

And in Miyazaki, Japan, Andy Bean of the U.S. broke away from a Japanese co-leader with a two-under-par 70 and took a two-stroke lead halfway through a $312,000 tournament.

The 25-year-old Bean, who won three major PGA tournaments this year, had a 36-hole total of 137, five-under par on the par-72 Phoenix Country Club course.

Pats Didn't Help

Regina Pats failed to give Victoria Cougars any help Thursday night in Portland, dropping an 11-5 decision to Winter Hawks in one of two Western Hockey League games.

In the other contest, Billings Bighorns downed visiting Saskatoon Blades, 7-4.

The win boosted Hawks to within two points of Cougars in the Western Division and the Portland club still enjoys nine games in hand over the leaders.

Cougars and Hawks clash Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Early momentum didn't do Pats any good.

The Regina club scored the first goal of every period, but it was the Winter Hawks who carried the play, outshooting the visitors, 52-29.

Portland got two goals each from John Multan, Florent Robidoux, Perry Turnbull and Max Kostovich. Blake Wesley, Mike Toal and David Babych also scored for Portland, which led 7-4 after two periods.

Barry Ziegler scored twice for Regina, with singles going to Jock Callander, Brian Varga and Dirk Graham.

Regina coach Greg Pilling pulled goaltender Ken McNabb with 2:52 remaining in the game and his club trailing by five goals, but the move only resulted in Multan's second goal of the night into the empty net.

CFL 'NOT READY'

TORONTO (CP) — The bid to purchase majority interest of the Toronto Argonauts will not be approved by the Canadian Football League when executives meet today to discuss the matter.

Bill Hodgson, majority owner of the club, made a deal with John Bassett, Sr., to sell 60 per cent of the team after the Argos were eliminated from the Eastern Conference playoffs on Nov. 5. But Hamilton Tiger-Cats, among others, are not prepared to talk about the sale just yet.

"We are not prepared to vote for the Bassetts now," Ralph Sazio, Ticat executive vice-president, said Thursday. "We feel we have not received enough documentation to support the purchase and will wait until we do."

Pro May Be First In Amateur Draft

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The first player to be selected in next summer's amateur hockey draft by a National League team will probably be a professional.

Frank Milne, a players' agent scouting Western Hockey League talent, predicts "the Birmingham Seven" probably will dominate the first round in next June's selections.

"The seven signed by Birmingham are eligible for the (NHL) draft this year and they'll be right up front," Milne said Thursday. "The thing is that they're all playing very well."

Signed to a personal services contracts by Birmingham owner John Bassett, Jr., and in defiance of an agreement that was supposed to prevent the signing of underage juniors, were Craig Hartsburg, Gaston Gingras, Rob Ramage, Louis Sleigher, Rick Vaive, Michel Goulet and Keith Crowder.

The first six-named are still with the World Hockey Association Bulls but Crowder returned to complete his final junior campaign with Peterborough Petes.

Milne predicts Hartsburg, a defenceman, "probably" will be the No. 1 draft choice, followed by Gingras and Ramage, also defencemen.

"Among those still playing junior, it looks like (Brian) Propp and (Ray) Allison (Brandon Wheat Kings' dynamic duo running 1-2 in the WHL's individual scoring race) will be the first to go. Perry Turnbull of Portland could also be a high, first-round draft pick."

"Apart from Robert Dailey (a defenceman with Montreal Junior Canadiens), there's not a great deal of outstanding draft choices in the east. Both the Ontario and Quebec leagues have some outstanding 17-year-olds, however."

Milne also says hockey scouts regard two Victoria centres — captain Geordie Robertson and Gary Lupul — highly. Milne, who played briefly with the old Cougar pro team, was scheduled to meet the Victoria players today.

Which players?

"All of them. We don't grab the best and ignore the rest," he replied.

Officially, Milne is director of team sports for the Canadian division of International Management Group, "the largest sports management organization in the world."

IMG is headed by Cleveland lawyer Mark McCormack, perhaps better known as the man who helped steer golfer Arnold Palmer towards becoming a multi-millionaire.

The McCormack stable includes tennis player Jimmy Connors and 63 hockey players.

"As far as hockey goes, I guess (Alan) Eagleson has the most clients. Overall, however, IMG is bigger. The biggest thing about IMG is that every possible service is provided from within the company.

"Some management groups handle only the player's contract, then farm everything else out. We have our own legal department, accountants, sponsorship and endorsement avenues. Everthing. You have more control over what you're doing for your client."

Milne says he, personally, does not favor the signing of underage or pre-draft players and he feels Bassett's signing of 18-year-olds is a tactic designed to recoup losses incurred as the result of operating the WHA team in Birmingham.

A case in point was Ken Linseman. Signed as an underage player by Bassett, Linseman was Philadelphia Flyers' first claim in last summer's NHL draft. Bassett, says Milne, sold Linseman's contract to the NHL club "for $500,000."

Milne predicts similar sales will be made next year after NHL clubs put in their claims for the Birmingham Seven.

Under a personal services contract, each of the seven is reportedly being paid $50,000 a year. After the draft, the player (or his agent) may seek bids from the NHL team seeking his services. Once an offer has been made, Bassett will have 30 days in which to match or better the NHL team's offer.

Milne feels that, in most cases, Bassett will match the NHL offer and then sell the player's contract to the bidding team.

"I guess its one way Bassett hopes to recover some of his losses."

On Craigflower Creek: To Dam or Not to Dam

Victoria's parks committee and the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association deserve some sort of anti-award for their myopic and hasty rejection of the fish and wildlife branch proposal to enhance sea-run cutthroat habitat on Craigflower Creek.

The branch submitted a proposal to the committee to improve a number of small dams and spillways in the park and was prepared to put $15,000 to $20,000 — the estimated cost of changes designed to control water flow in the creek — into the project.

Chris Dodd, head of the branch's urban recreation division, made the proposal before the committee and said dam reconstruction will have to be carried out regardless because recent inspections by the water rights branch revealed the two 83-year-old dams in the park dm not meet minimum allowable water resources standards.

Mayor Mike Young and Alderman Murray Glazier opposed the proposal because they thought it would cost the city money and were concerned it would be detrimental to swimming.

But their concerns, I believe, aren't justified.

The dams would only raise the water two feet above the high water mark — where the vegatation now starts. Lakes normally reach their high water marks for only a few months out of every year and those extra two feet of shoreline would probably be fully flooded only during the winter.

The branch is currently working on a major fisheries rehabilitation project in the Gorge waterway, into which the Craigflower feeds, designed to produce 50,000 adult sea-run cutthroat trout over the next five years. Salmon, which also utilize the system, would also benefit from the enhancement work.

Sea-runs in the Gorge rely entirely on Craigflower and Colquitz creeks for spawning purposes.

Dodd explained that the Craigflower system now floods in the rainy season and goes dry in the summer, making it extremely difficult for young fish to survive.

This hazard is further compounded by a pollution problem in the lower section of the stream, which will probably abate when sewers are installed in the area within two years. Higher water levels would help dilute the effluent until that time.

The latest chapter in the story involves the Sanctuary Association, which stated — possibly on the basis of erroneous information — that the proposal would mar the aesthetic values of the park.

Two points should be made. The lakes were created from swampland originally — and the shoreline vegetation appears to have recovered rather well. In addition, the proposed additional flooding would only affect 12 Douglas fir trees — which aren't as susceptible to flooding as some appear to think.

In the final analysis, I don't believe you can really equate the possible demise of 12 trees and other assorted vegetation with the fisheries values that will continue to decline if the project isn't backed.

An interesting study, jointly financed by the fish and wildlife branch and federal fisheries, tends to support the concept of enhancement activities in the Victoria area.

"Sport fishing is an important activity for urban British Columbians, ranking ninth in Vancouver and eighth in Victoria over the full range of activities enjoyed by residents," the report states.

"The future of fishing, and of the satisfactions it provides, seem dependent upon two critical factors: continued involvement of urban children in the fishing experience, and the continued existence of fishing opportunities easily accessible to urban areas."

Sweden Cuts Ties For Non Payment

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Swedish Hockey League decided Thursday to temporarily cut off its exchange program with North American pro hockey after a National Hockey League club failed to make the final payment for a Swedish import.

But to prevent a conflict with the Swedish Hockey Federation, the league voted to go ahead with a planned tour of four World Hockey Association cities and one game against an NHL development team here next month.

Leksand, one of the top Swedish clubs, still is waiting for the final payment from New York Islanders, almost two years after goaltender Goran Hogosta was signed by them.

Named the top goalie in the 1977 Vienna world championships, Hogosta only played nine minutes for the Islanders in his rookie season in 1977-78.

Hogosta currently plays with Fort Worth Texans, the Islanders' farm team in the Central League.

Leksand did not disclose how much money is in arrears. The NHL and the Swedish federation have an agreement which stipulates that the NHL team pays $80,000 for each player as compensation to his Swedish team.

A similar agreement with the WHA and the Swedish federation expired last year.

The Islanders have another Swedish import, defenceman Stefan Persson. But Brynas, Persson's former Swedish team, received the payment for him some time ago.

Despite inflation, the transfer amounts have not been increased and there is no secret that Swedish hockey officials are unhappy with the current agreement with the NHL.

"Of course, we don't want to lose our top guys for nothing. We want a new and better agreement with the NHL," says Richard Fagerlund, president of the Swedish league. The league also is working on a new agreement with the WHA.

Swedish Vikings, a team made up of the best players outside the national team, will make their second WHA tour in less than a year Dec.14-19.

They are scheduled to play New England Whalers Dec. 14, Winnipeg Jets Dec. 15, Edmonton Oilers Dec. 17 and Quebec Nordiques Dec. 19.

Another game, pitting a Stockholm all-star team against an NHL squad of "future stars," is scheduled here Dec. 14 before the Izvestia tourney starting two days later in Moscow.

AROUND OUR SHORES

It will be slogging, not sailing, for members of the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association this weekend as they continue working on their dinghy enclosure at Tulista Park in Sidney.

Commodore Henry Niezen says work gets under way at 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. The club has the poles in place for the 150 by 50-foot enclosure and hope to have all the fencing up by the time the weekend is over.

Once that's done, Henry says the next project is the building of a 12 by 16-foot clubhouse.

Members of the enthusiastic Victoria Hobie fleet, who are thinking of joining the club, will be there to lend a hand.

While most clubs decided to cancel racing on the weekend because of the storm that lashed waters in this area into a turmoil, two Hobie crews decided to test what their craft could take in waters off Willows Beach on Sunday.

Watching them zip through the rough seas was a sight I'll never forget. Fleet commodore Mark Philbrook had Eric Jespersen crewing with him in his Hobie 16 while Jim Vosburgh, Brian McLeod and Dale Bellavance paced it out in Jim's Hobie 18.

Mark claims he hit speeds of up to 25 knots and I think the claim is justified. Changing course in those wind conditions would test the mettle of any sailor. The only way they could tack was to dump the boat, right her again and carry on.

In spite of this and the wintry conditions, Brian reports their wetsuits kept them as warm as toast.

The only actual racing on the weekend took place at Sidney on Saturday when 19 hardy skippers and crews of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club stuck it out around a six-mile course, most of them with reefed mains and storm jibs. Normally, a field of at least 50 boats can be expected to take part.

The over-all winner was Jim Morris' Madeline. After her came Larry Mofford's Main Brace, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Bev Westman's Tiercel, John Barker's Interlude, Holger Brix's Caliente, Barry Camp's Chantarelle, George Redzich's Selga, Gerry Guest's Auriga and Alan Dickinson's Red Sled.

The club has a 7½-miler scheduled for Sunday. Start time will be at 10 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club cruising class boats and Cal 20 fleet cancelled their long-distance race on Sunday because of the weather but many of them will be out this Sunday to join Turkey Head Sailing Association boats in two around-the-buoy races in waters off Oak Bay Marina. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

On Saturday, the club's Catalina 27 fleet will hold two races at Cadboro Bay, the first one beginning at 11 a.m. The races will be the first of a six-race series planned by the fleet.

The club's dinghy sailors will also have series racing on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m. For obvious reasons, there was no racing last Saturday.

The wind also scuttled the centreboard championships which the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, had planned to run on Sunday. They'll try again this Sunday. The first race is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Denny Coverdale of the Philbrook shipyard in Sidney is pretty excited about the attention being given the yard's Fast Passage 39 sloop, designed by well-known local marine architect Bill Garden.

During the past few days two of them have been sold and shipped to American boat dealers, one to John Berry and Co. of San Francisco and the other to Cobb and Stokes in Annapolis, Md.

Nine Past Passage 39s have been built and sold to date and another nine, all sold, are in the making.

When the local economy isn't exactly something to cheer about, it's good to see Philbrook is still highly competitive in the boating world.

SHORT TACKS — Rookie members of the Victoria Canoe Club can always rely on Jack Akins to give them some pointers on how to upgrade their paddling skills although chances are they'll be asked to use their own canoe.

This is because of Jack's new form of transportation. He cuts quite a figure roaring along on his slick new motorcycle with a lifejacket and paddle strapped on.

He can be reached after 5 p.m. at 384-4538 and may have time to spare on Saturdays or during the week.

Johnston Selected

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Watters, chairman of the National Hockey League-sponsored team that will enter the Izvestia tournament in Moscow in December, announced Thursday that Marshall Johnston has been named coach.

Johnston, head coach of the Denver University hockey team, replaces John Ferguson, named this week general manager-coach of Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

Johnston was assistant coach with Team Canada at the world championships in Prague in April.

Johnston's assistant for the Izvestia tournament will be former Vancouver Canucks captain Andre Boudrias.

LIONS THROW A SURPRISE AT BRONCOS

Landry Goes to Whip

Times News Services

Like a good jockey, waiting until the crucial moment on the backstretch, Dallas coach Tom Landry has applied the whip to his National Football League-champion Cowboys.

They flew past Washington like a thoroughbred in Dallas, Thursday, in a 37-10 Thanksgiving Day rout that gave the Cowboys a game lead over the Redskins in the National Conference Eastern Division with three games to play.

"We were ready to play—this is the best we've played," said Landry, whose teams characteristically flatten out in the middle of the season, then breathe fire when it counts. "We were just going so strong it would have been difficult for any team to stop us today regardless of who we played."

Washington quarterback Joe Theismann concluded: "All you can say is the Cowboys kicked the hell out of us. I know they kicked the hell out of me."

Dallas now is 9-4 and Washington 8-5. The Cowboys, should the teams again fall into a tie, have an insurmountable tiebreaker edge over the Redskins.

Washington, of course, is still very much alive in the wild-card scramble. Two teams from each conference get a wild-card berth this year.

Dallas jumped on Washington with 13 first-quarter points—the most for the Cowboys in the opening 15 minutes this year—then pounded the scrambling Redskins in revenge for an earlier 9-5 loss to Washington.

In Pontiac, Mich., Doug English anchored a Detroit defensive line that sacked Denver quarterback Craig Morton six times as the Lions defeated the Broncos 17-14.

English, a fifth-year all-America tackle from Texas, tackled Morton four times behind the line of scrimmage.

The loss dropped Denver to 8-5 and a half-game behind first-place Oakland Raiders in the AFC West. The Broncos' next game is at Oakland.

"English got a game ball," said Detroit coach Monte Clark. "He was captain today, indicating what I think of him."

The sacks lifted Detroit's league-leading total to 48.

Rick Kane and Horace King scored Detroit's touchdowns on plunges in the first and fourth quarters, respectively, to cap drives of 90 and 77 yards. Benny Ricardo kicked a 19-yard field goal in the third period after a Morton fumble.

Denver's scoring came on a 10-yard pass from Morton to tight end Riley Odoms to tie the game at 7-7 in the first period and a two-yard run in the third quarter by Wisconsin rookie Larry Canada that gave the Broncos their only lead, 14-10.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Oak Bay Blanks Winless Islanders

Oak Bay Trios came up with all their goals in the first two periods en route to an 8-0 shutout over Kerry Park Islanders in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Thursday at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

The win moved Oak Bay, which held period leads of 4-0 and 8-0, to within three points of fourth-place Esquimalt Legion Blues and left Kerry Park still looking for a victory after 16 starts.

Mike Smith and Rick Schievink set the pace with two goals each and singles were contributed by John Brown, Ron Pearce, Joe Miller and Ian McLaren.

Tony Burns of Kerry Park made 36 saves while Gary Smith recorded the shutout by blocking 21 shots.

Public Sector Backing Sought

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Delegates to the B.C. Federation of Labor convention were urged Thursday to band together against what labor feels is a concerted attack on public sector employees by all levels of governemt.

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said this should be the number one priority of the federation next year.

He was speaking during discussion of a policy statement on a federal bill to amend public sector bargaining legislation.

The legislation would tie public sector wages to those in the private sector through a formula called average comparability of total compensation.

Fryer said this will, in effect, return public sector unions to earlier days when, rather than collective bargaining they had to engage in "collective begging" for wage hikes.

The employers in B.C. have already joined forces in the Public Sector Employers Council and determined that next year's wage increase for public employees will be four per cent, he said.

"There is no way in the world that the BCGEU is going to settle for four per cent in 1979," he said.

Fryer added facetiously that the union would be prepared to accept comparability with the average income of the members of the Social Credit caucus of MLAs.

He said one response on the part of unions to employers forming a joint council is to set up a Public Sector Workers Council "and take them on head to head."

He said the federal legislation is simply a sign that Ottawa is running interference for the provincial and municipal governments which are about to launch an attack on pubic sector unions.

Frank Walden, national director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said if the federal legislation takes effect it will set the pubic sector back 10 years.

"We must get out and fight to defeat this bill with a united front," he said.

The delegates gave unanimous support to a recommendation ordering the federation to organize demonstrations, meetings and lobbies to defeat the federal legislation.

The federation pledged itself to call a one-day conference of all affiliates to work out a province-wide education program on all aspects of the bill.

The labor body also condemned the B.C. government for forming the Public Sector Employers Council and called for its abolition.

Peril Of The Enemy Within: Ruff

Times Staff

VANCOUVER — B.C.'s human rights director Thursday urged trade unions to take action against the racial intolerance she said is sweeping the province.

Kathleen Ruff said there are a few people fomenting fear and hatred against British Columbians "who don't have white skin like themselves."

Such prejudice is not new to B.C., Ruff said, but what is different this time is that it is going unopposed.

"People have gone into hiding in the face of this hatred," she told the B.C. Federation of Labor convention.

She urged union officials to see that human rights issues are put on the agenda for their union meetings and for the union members to take "a visible position" on the matter in their communities.

She said the unions should examine their own organizations as well as their work places to ensure that there is open and equal access to jobs for all races and minorities.

"A commitment to human rights by your members can help diffuse the intolerance and hostility.

Spending Curbs On Way: Andras

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Treasury Board President Robert Andras said Thursday the sheer size of government makes it impossible to eliminate all wasteful spending and financial mismanagement.

But he insisted the government is making progress in its effort to gain control over spending that now has reached about $50 billion a year.

His comments, at a news conference, came after Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell released an annual report saying public servants see the federal treasury as "virtually bottomless" and that tax funds are spent with little regard to economy or efficiency.

Andras said it is unrealistic to think the government will get to the point where there are no problems associated with its spending.

Instead, it wanted to see that there is a year-by-year reduction in the "volume and examples of waste."

Earlier in the Commons, Opposition Leader Joe Clark urged the government to adopt Macdonell's latest proposals to increase control over public spending.

Clark said the time has come for the government to provide an "unequivocal guarantee" that Parliament will be given a tighter grip over annual spending programs.

Andras assured the Commons the government is taking action to move on Macdonell's recommendations. And he pointed with pride to sections of the auditor-general's report where Macdonell compliments the government on its efforts to tighten control over spending.

Clark asked whether the government is prepared to allow Commons committees to examine some spending estimates "without limitation to time." Under House rules, MPs are forced to complete their examination of spending estimates in a four-month period ending in late June.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he wouldn't mind making some changes, but that he never gets any co-operation from the opposition.

He said opposition MPs "talk for days and days and days" and slow up the parliamentary process.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham), incensed at what he called the horror stories documented by Macdonell, said:

"If this (the government) was an ordinary corporation, there would be grounds to remove the board of directors post haste."

Let He Who Is Without Sin. . .

Macdonell

OTTAWA (CP) — Physican heal thyself?

For a moment Thursday, Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell found himself called to account for the same sort of financial sins he ascribes to the government.

In his annual report to Parliament, he noted that government spending had increased a hefty 487 per cent during the last 15 years to $42.9 billion at March 31 this year.

At a news conference later, a reporter reminded the auditor-general that there have been increases in his own department as well.

Spending had risen to $25 million this year from $1 million 15 years ago—a walloping 2,500 per cent.

Macdonell conceded with a chuckle that the figures are correct, but said he wouldn't have asked for any increase "if I didn't think it was needed."

Abuse of UIC Hit In Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance officials did not follow proper procedures when issuing about $1.5 billion of the total $3.9 billion in benefits paid last year, says Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen later issued a statement saying he is concerned by the findings and plans to implement new measures next year to prevent and deter abuse and fraud.

At the same time he said prosecutions and administrative penalties for cheaters have been increasing and he believes the public perception that the program is easy to rip-off is changing.

New measures will include a program requiring employers to submit the social insurance numbers of all new employees so they can be matched with lists of insurance beneficiaries.

There will be a new computer system aimed at reducing errors that cause overpayments. Official procedures will be monitored to see if they are adequate and consistent in different regions and investigation-control methods will be rewritten, he said.

Macdonell's report contains details of the $142 million in overpayments last year to claimants who did not qualify. This was in addition to $67 million in overpayments the government did detect and has tried to recover.

"A further significant amount of claims were subject to diviations from laid-down procedures and a large but unquantifiable category of claims was subject to conditions which could invite abuse."

Macdonell drew these conclusions after studying benefits paid to a sample of 1,033 out of the 2.5 million recipients last year.

In 253 cases, overpayments of between $93 and $161 were paid. In nine cases, potential overpayments of up to $39 were found.

Total estimated overpayments: $142 million.

In 257 cases, officials did not use proper follow-up practices to determine claimant eligibility for benefits. Such practices are designed to catch people, for example, who work and collect benefits at the same time.

Macdonell says this likely means that $950 million in benefits was paid without any follow-up checks.

STOP MEDDLING, AUSSIES WARNED

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian officials and a visiting Australian politician Thursday warned the Australian postal workers union to "stop meddling in affairs that don't concern them" and leave the issue of criminal charges against nine postal union leaders to Canadians.

They were reacting to reports that the Australian postal and telecommunications union had sent a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau warning that communications between Canada and Australia would be cut off if charges are laid against leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers who defied back-to-work orders from Parliament last month.

"It is an internal Canadian affair," said Roger Shipton, a Liberal party member of the Australian House of Representatives.

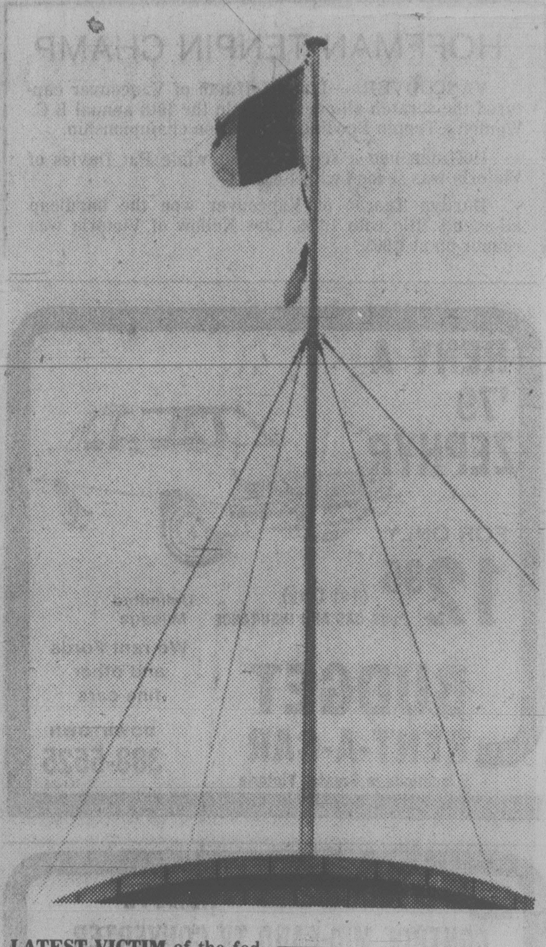
$14 Million Profit In U.S. Beer Sale

The provincial government will have made a profit of $14 million on the sale of United States beer this fall when it sells the remainder of its stock, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday.

The minister said in a news release 100,000 dozen U.S. beer have been sold in the past week, leaving only 150,000 dozen to go before a stockpile, brought in during a labor dispute in the B.C. brewing industry,. is completely sold.

He said sale of U.S. beer since the strike-lockout began will exceed $40 million.

The price was reduced to $3.84 a dozen — the break-even point — last week to clear the stock before expiry of its shelf life. Mair said the quality of the remaining beer is still good even if it has passed its peak shelf life.



LATEST VICTIM of the federal government's cutback program, or just plain neglect? The tattered Maple Leaf flag atop the federally-owned Belmont Building in downtown Victoria has some flag-wavers muttering. But federal officials aren't taking the blame because the building is leased to the Calgary-based development company of Abacus Cities Ltd.

No Intention of Selling B.C. Rail, Says Bennett

The Social Credit government will not sell the B.C. Railway as recommended by a royal commission into B.C. Railway affairs.

Premier Bill Bennett stated the no-sale policy Thursday.

"It's an important part of B.C.'s transportation system and will continue to be just that," Bennett said, adding the government is preparing a comprehensive transportation policy which will include a financing formula for the BCR.

Bennett said the government has no intention of selling the BCR to the Canadian National Railways as suggested by the commission.

"That's never been considered by the government because our transportation policy has revolved around being responsible in directing our own transportation systems — ferries, highways, air and rail."

The commission, in its final report released Friday, said if the province is unable to divest itself of the BCR, it should turn the railway into a Crown corporation and stay out of its affairs.

The report called on the government to assume the railway's $700 million debt in return for an increase in the province's common shareholding in the railway.

Bennett said the government has moved in advance of the report and established the railway as a Crown corporation with an independent board of directors.

"The railway is a Crown corporation now, both in fact and in reality. It operates without political interference in fact and in reality."

Bennett re-iterated government policy that the BCR would continue to operate the money-loosing Fort Nelson extension as promised earlier in the year — contrary to recommendations in an interim report by the commission.

Bennett said he sees many encouraging things for the railway, and pointed to a natural gas scrubbing plant in Chetwynd which he said will produce another $1 million a year in revenue through the hauling of sulphur.

"There's many products and many of our resources that are being developed now that will provide additional freight and revenue for the railway — so I think it's got some outstanding prospects."

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Bennett is repudiating the royal commission.

"He is now assuming his responsibility and acting politically. We've wasted two years of B.C.'s time on the premier's lack of action."

Barrett said the government should re-open the Railwest railcar plant at Squamish, B.C. and start negotiating with the U.S. and with Alaska and get the railroad on through to Alaska.

"He is being negative towards B.C. and negative towards our future. We have a very timid, frightened government that has made a botch-up of almost everything they've touched and now they don't know which way to turn after this royal commission."

"If he thinks somebody else is going to get us started, he's got another think coming. British Columbians have never asked for hand-outs from someone else. We have always done the job ourselves or started to get the job done in co-operation with other people.

"I've never heard such negative comments from a person who is supposed to be the leader of the province of B.C."

ICBC GIVEN STRIKE NOTICE

Union workers at the Insurance Corp. of B.C. have served the Crown corporation with 72-hour strike notice.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said talks between ICBC and the Office and Technical Employees Union have broken down, but mediator Jack Chatelas, who has been meeting with both sides since last Friday, has not reported out of the dispute.

The mediator must report out before a strike can legally occur. Egby said strike notice was delivered Wednesday on behalf of the 2,200 workers represented by the union.

The ICBC spokesman said the union has asked for an 8½-per-cent increase in the first year and 6-per-cent in the second year of a two-year agreement. It has also asked for a cost-of-living allowance if inflation exceeds the first-year increase, he said.

Egby said the company has offered 5 3-4 per cent in the first year but has not made a specific offer for the second year of the contract.

Re-Refinery Set for B.C.

BURNABY (CP) — Mohawk Oil Co. is planning to build the biggest re-refinery plant in British Columbia at a cost of $3 million to process used oil from motor vehicle crankcases.

Gordon Winter, special projects manager of Mohawk subsidiary Waste Oil Salvage Co., said Wednesday the company will employ about 15 persons and begin operation next summer.

Winter said the location of the plant likely will be determined next week, with four suburban Vancouver sites—in Burnaby, North Vancouver, Delta and Surrey—being considered.

He said there should be no major problems in getting a site approved because lubricating oil, unlike gasoline, is not easily ignited.

Mohawk says it is western Canada's biggest independent gasoline retailer, with 250 retail outlets from B.C. to Manitoba. It also sells lubricating oils, tires, batteries and associated auto products.

SLACK MORTGAGE MARKET FUELING LOCAL RATE WAR

Montreal Trust has reduced its five-year conventional mortgage rate to 11 per cent from 11.25 per cent as a price war continues in Victoria.

"We have a surplus of five-year money we want to move out and the mortgage market has been slack," Victoria manager D. C. Field said Thursday.

"We hope this reduction will stimulate the market."

Earlier WestCoast Savings Credit Union announced it would hold one of its five-year mortgage plans to 10.75 per cent in an effort to move out more money.

Spokesmen for banks and other trust companies said they are also studying their rates in view of the slow market.

Field said his company reduced its rate because it has accumulated an unusally high number of deposits this fall.

"For example, the Canada Savings Bond rate has not been very attractive and people are rolling over their bonds into five-year-term interest deposits."

In a single month the Victoria branch of Montreal Trust took in $250,000 in five-year deposits from people cashing in these bonds.

Field said an erroneous radio report indicated his mortgage rate had been cut to 10 per cent, instead of 11 per cent.

"Our switchboard was jammed with calls. This shows there are all kinds of people waiting to borrow money if the rates are low enough."

He said the mortgage market is always slow at this time of year and the recent increase to 11.25 per cent had further dampened the market, forcing the rate reduction to 11.

Belleville Homes Reprieved

Three old houses on Belleville which were facing demolition — despite the heritage value of two — will be saved because the Black Ball ferry now docks on the south side of the harbor.

A planning commision report approved by Victoria city council Thursday said developers have decided the buildings are worth saving because of an increased tourist flow in the neighborhood.

"The recent relocation of all ferry facilities to the south side of the Inner Harbor has enhanced the demand for tourist attractions and food facilities adjacent to the ferry terminals," said the report.

Pembroke Management Ltd. plans to renovate the three old buildings at 309, 321 and 327 Belleville. The houses are commercially operated as the Captain's Palace Restaurant, Land of the Little People and the Hunter Haunted House.

The Palace and Haunted House are listed by the Heritage Advisory Committee as worthy of designation.

Pembroke's plans call for improvements to the buildings, addition of a gift shop between 321 and 327 Belleville, and the re-opening of a restaurant behind 327.

Demolition of the buildings seemed imminent when a new hotel was in the works for the block bounded by Belleville, Oswego, Quebec and Pendray.

Although that proposal never materialized the planning commission report indicates a large development may still come forward.

The report said Pembroke has suggested it may want to move the three buildings at a later date.

REVIEW FACES BAY MERGER

OTTAWA (CP) — The Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA) will not make a decision on the Hudson's Bay Co. bid to merge with Simpsons Ltd. until the companies concerned and provincial governments have made their representations, the agency said Thursday.

An agency statement reported Commerce Minister Jack Horner as saying there was no possible way to indicate a specific date for completion of the deal until the representations have been made.

It also reported that Horner said acquisition of Simpsons by foreign-controlled Hudson's Bay Co. is not reviewable under the Foreign Investment Review Act if the right to acquire control existed prior to the Act's proclamation on April 9, 1974.

Quebec Sect Awaits February Doomsday

PASPEBIAC, Que. (CP) — "Some people think they've seen the Light, some think they're an enigma," the local parish priest was saying.

"Some people are bothered by them, but they admire their way of life and the way they've abandoned everything."

The object of his comments was a group of religious enthusiasts who have been awaiting the end of the world at the foot of what they call "The Mountain of the Eternal," in the Gaspe peninsula.

Not every local resident is as charitable as the priest. "They're a bunch of nuts," one man said of his new neighbors.

Led by 31-year-old Roch Theriault, who calls himself Moise (Moses), the group of five men, 10 women and a two-year-old child, built a log cabin and renamed the hill where they settled during the summer.

The closest village to the commune is St. Jogues, about 12 kilometres away.

Theriault declared in a recent interview that the world will end — or at least be plunged into chaos — next February, "a spiritual month."

Meanwhile, the group is purifying itself through prayer and meditation, and awaiting the births of four more children, three of them expected this winter.

Their presence has piqued the curiosity of local residents, who regularly visit them, some bringing provisions. They have also been under occasional surveillance by provincial police, and the Quebec government is said to be concerned by the fact that they are squatting on Crown land.

But no move has been made to evict them.

The sect began in the Beauce region, south of Quebec City. There they organized public meetings, with sermons by the black-bearded Theriault, a native of Thetford Mines. They also offered five-day plans to help people quit smoking and encourage them to eat natural foods.

Twenty-nine people — 13 of whom have since tired of waiting for the day of doom and apparently gone home — came to the Gaspe in June, in two trucks, a station wagon and a school bus. They left behind a house full of furniture in Ste. Marie-de-Beauce.

Jean-Pierre Henri, who owns property in this area, allowed the group to camp on his land. But when Theriault began performing wedding ceremonies, and baptisms in a river that runs through the land, Henri decided to ask them to leave.

Previously, he said, he had found the sect "very likable, organized and meticulous." He added that he usually agreed with Theriault's interpretations of the Bible.

Before Henri could ask them to go, the group dismantled their camp in July, moving to the mountain which Theriault said he had seen in a dream.

There they stay, and there they wait. For February.

Regina Spill Threat Slim

REGINA (CP) — There is no need for immediate concern over the spill two years ago of about 1,500 gallons of polychlorinated biphenyls, deputy environment minister Grant Mitchell said Thursday.

But no one is sure of what long-term threat the spill inside Regina's city limits may represent and a team from the National Research Council has been called for advice, Mitchell said at a news conference.

Polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs for short, are used in electrical transformers and are suspected of causing cancer.

Mitchell also said his department made a serious error in not informing the public at the time of the spill.

He said he will recommend to the legislature that laws be passed to make reports of such spills mandatory.

The federal and Saskatchewan governments have denied any cover-up of the spill of PCBs, although Regina civic officials only found out about the contamination this week.

The Saskatchewan department of labor found out about the spill while checking a complaint about working conditions from an employee of Federated Pioneer Ltd., operator of an electrical plant where the spill occurred.

The company recovered several thousand gallons of a water-PCBs mixture by pumping from holes drilled in the spill area.

In November, 1976, the environment department agreed the company should cover the spill area with asphalt to keep it free of water.

It was estimated that at least 1,000 tons of soil would have to be removed to recover the contaminated soil.

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand said earlier that 200 cubic feet of soil had been removed from the site and shipped to a chemical waste disposal site in the United States.

PEDAGOGUE WINS IN DOUBLESPEAK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A former executive vice-president of the University of California has been given the 1978 Doublespeak Award for a memo he wrote for the CIA in 1968.

The Committee on Public Doublespeak of the National Council of Teachers makes the annual award to "the year's most significant example of deceptive use of language by spokespersons for government, industry, media or other groups."

The award went to Earl Clinton Bolton, who wrote a memo entitled Agency-Academic Relations.

Bolton's memo suggests that college instructors assisting the CIA should defend their involvement by explaining it "as a contribution to ... proper academic goals," and outlines the best way to deliver "an apologia for CIA involvement ...(with) full use of the jargon of the academe."

It says that the doctrines of academic freedom, privilege and tenure are "fiercely protected" and when a professor or institution is attacked for aiding the CIA, they should "base a rejoinder on these sacred doctrines."

An Artistic Flair To Children's Year

elizabeth forbes

Almost as soon as 1979 was designated by the United Nations general assembly as the International Year of the Child (IYC), Bill and Roz Bowie of the Emily Carr Art Centre here decided they wanted to do something to mark this important year, as they had done for UN's International Women's Year.

"We mulled it over," Bowie said, "and we thought it would be exciting to have an exhibition of children's art from around the world."

Today that idea is about to become a reality.

An exhibition of international children's art, in celebration of 1979, the UN Year of the Child, will be officially opened in the Emily Carr Art Centre, 207 Government, at 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 2, and will be available there for public viewing until Jan. 5.

As the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) has been designated the "lead agency" of the UN system for IYC, Mrs. Muriel Summers, head of the Victoria committee, has been invited to officially declare the exhibition open.

How did the Bowies manage to make this dream come true?

It's taken almost a year of continuous effort, Bill Bowie says.

First he compiled a list of countries and their embassies and consulates.

"It was quite a business. I ended up with over a hundred."

Early last spring, letters went out to those embassies and consulates telling of the proposed exhibition and suggesting they participate.

Replies came in from interested countries requesting more information.

That's when the Bowies sat down and really went to work to get detailed information back "in double-quick time."

Result? Entries have arrived and are still arriving from some 20 countries around the world.

"Delays in shipping have slowed delivery in some instances" Bowie says, "but we now have the nucleus of an exciting display."

As he explains it, the rules say entries may be on paper, cloth or any other support that is easy to transport, and that work is acceptible in pencil, ink, crayon, paint, paper cut-outs and pasting, weaving or anything a child creates.

Ages of the young artists range "anywhere from preschool to mid-teens."

The Bowies also asked for supportive material in the form of literature and photos of the regions, lifestyle of the child and background of the country.

"This has resulted in an interesting mix," Bill tells you. "Some countries have sent only supplementary material, others children's art without supportive materials, and still others have sent both."

Asked for the names of some of the countries represented, he picks out Denmark, Poland, West Germany, Brazil, Panama, Nigeria, West Africa, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Malaysia, Luxembourg, Holland, France, Belgium, Sweden, Finland and the United States.

An entry from England includes "some beautiful work" from a recent national portrait gallery exhibit of kings and queens done by children.

Work of British Columbia children will be shown as typical of this part of Canada.

The Bowies now have hopes this collection will be an ongoing exhibition available for travel throughout British Columbia during 1979 and as a permanent exhibit for loan across Canada after that.

"Slides from the United States, Holland, England, China and British Columbia were collected on Super-8 film," Bowie explains," then transferred to videotape that is now available, on request, to inerested groups and individuals."

An Anniversary — The International Year of the Child makes the 20th anniversary of the United Nations' declaration of the Rights of the Child.

In this way the UN is urging the world to recall the principles of that declaration, redouble efforts to put those principles into practice and to strengthen its concern for the present condition of its chilren.

The UN is also emphasizing "the need for people everywhere to recognize that the peace and prosperity of tomorrow's world depends on the well-being of today's child."

Give New Life To Old Shoes

What's in Store

Joan Watson

Who benefits from the high price of shoes?

The shoe repair business. More consumers are giving old footwear a second lease on life by having soles and lifts replaced instead of throwing worn shoes and boots away.

It's not easy to find a master shoe repairman today and very few technical schools offer courses. Most newcomers learn on the job — and on your shoes. But I have found a gem. A real craftsman who has been around since 1932 rebuilding the shoes during the Depression, the no-nonsense footwear of the war years, and the spike heels, cowboy boots and espadrilles and sandals that have been trotting through the doors in more recent years. This makes him a fund of practical and amusing information on the footwear of Canadians.

He's a great believer in leather shoes. He believes in quality. A shoe has to be well made of good materials to be worth the escalating costs of rebuilding. Men are more likely to repair shoes instead of throwing them out.

Women are coming around to this point of view and, while they're finding the classic styles in fine leather astronomical in price, they're also finding the quality can be maintained with careful cleaning and periodic repairs, and it's sometimes an economy if you pay more initially.

The exception to this rule is the type of high fashion shoe that is composed of a couple of straps, a thin shoe and a fragile novelty heel. Great fashion this season, but next to impossible to rebuild.

One thing a good shoe repairman can do is replace a molded leather sole. This is how I found my expert. A pair of eight-year-old loafers that had become old friends were in bad shape. About the only thing left was the shine on the uppers. My repairman replaced the thin molded leather soles, pure rubber lifts on the heels, relined them with soft leather and repaired the decoration on the vamp. You'd think they were new.

A lot of shoe repair outfits will tell you that high heels cannot be lowered. This is sometimes true. It's also a fact that it takes special skill and interest to tackle the job when it is possible. The design and last of the shoe must be studied. If the heel is difficult to reshape it must be replaced.

And at best, high heels can only be lowered a fraction. But a small adjustment is often enough to make the shoe more comfortable. So try your shoe repairman. He might have the skills and the materials to do the job.

You don't have to be reminded that road salt and moisture are the greatest enemies of leather shoes and boots. If you get stuck wearing leather instead of rubber or vinyl on a miserable day, the first thing to do is wipe off your footwear as soon as you get to the office or home. Keep a rag moistened with a little vinegar in a jar in your car and wipe away salt when you get in.

A commercial product, Desalter, does a reasonable job.

Use repellant sprays to condition all your leather footwear before you wear it for the first time and once a month thereafter. And my repairman says it's imperative to buy any one of half a dozen good brands of shoe cream and use it regularly as further protection.

This expert was reluctant to name any shoe brands that he finds are of superior quality. The main thing is to choose a quality and style shoe suited to the wear you intend to give it.

Having two pairs of basic walking shoes is better than wearing one pair into the ground and then replacing them. Giving your shoes recovery time is better for your feet, better for the shoes and also lets them air out.

Shoes tell a lot about their wearers. Dirty shoes say something about their owners. (My bank teller agrees. She says if a man has dirty shoes she thinks he'd have dirty habits.)

You can't be in business for almost 50 years and not have a few yarns to tell. My repairman is still wondering about the man who came in with a pair of boots to be repaired. He said he was in a hurry and wanted them done right away. He took them off and sat down to wait for them.

After a few minutes he said he was going out for a cup of coffee. Out he went — in his socks — and they haven't seen him since.

BOY'S DREAM

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — For Greg Cardinal, winning the 41st All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, recently was like a dream come true. The 13-year-old Flint boy drove his miniature racer to victory over 83 other competitors in the senior division. He won, among other prizes, a $3,000 scholarship.

Roof-Top Bubble Merits Eyed

hand around the house

By A. J. HAND

One of the most popular features on new homes these days is the skylight. These plastic bubbles are popping out of one roof after another — and not just on new homes.

Skylights are fairly easy to add to existing homes, so you are likely to see them on older homes as well. In the past few years I've added four to my house. During the time I've lived with them, I've learned some of their advantages and some of their disadvantages. Maybe my experiences will help you decide if you want one in your home.

ADVANTAGES: The biggest plus a skylight has to offer is lots of natural light. A strategically placed skylight can open up a dark room and give it an organic outdoors feeling that can't be duplicated with artificial light.

You can buy plastic bubble skylights in frosted-white or in clear. The frosted type gives a soft, relatively shadowless type of light. Clear bubbles give a harsher light if placed on an east-, west-, or south-facing roof where the sun can shine directly in.

If you buy the type of skylight that opens, you can also use a skylight for ventilation. Located up high, a skylight is in the ideal spot to vent off hot air during the summer.

DISADVANTAGES: Skylights have some drawbacks. For one thing, they are not energy efficient.

They give you free light and lots of it when the sun is shining, but they lose a lot of heat during the winter months. A skylight will lose about 14 times as much heat as a comparable section of insulated roof.

Then there's the price of skylights. An insulating double-dome type of skylight, 30 in. by 30 in., in its simplest non-opening form, runs to at least $80. An openable skylight with built-in frame and flashing for easy installation can cost two or three times as much.

ANOTHER PROBLEM: Any time you cut into a roof you are increasing your chances of a leak. A properly installed skylight will be watertight, but even a slight error in installation can spell trouble. If there is any way for water to leak through a roof you can be sure it will.

ONE LAST NOTE: Skylights are at their best when you add them to a dark room. But they are wasted in a room that already gets a fair amount of window light. I recently added a bay window near two skylights in my kitchen. Now for all practical purposes the skylights are providing no useful light.

Common ¢ents

What if you move into a new, well-carpeted home, but even the professional cleaner can't remove all unsightly stains? If the carpet's worth saving, ask a carpet cleaning company if the carpeting would clean up better at the plant. Doing so could be less expensive than buying new carpeting. It's not difficult to take up the carpeting yourself before the in-plant cleaning. But get a price on re-installing it before you decide to have it cleaned that way.

If you can sew even a little, look at the sew-easy kits for making down or polyester-filled jackets, vests, coveralls, etc. now carried by many fabric stores. A kit can hold pre-cut fabric and all needed supplies. Stitch up a kit and you save dollars you would have paid for someone else to keep you warm.

With a topographic map anglers can study a lake they've never seen, pick out a likely fishing spot, locate the nearest boat launch and the road to get there. A topographic map also shows hikers how rough an area is and the easiest way to climb hills and valleys.

If you decide to do more cold-water washing to save on electricity bills while the air conditioner's running, you soon realize more pre-soaking and pre-treating is necessary. You'll have to count on longer washing cycles to get clothes clean and use more detergent, which doesn't dissolve in cold water. Add the detergent to the wash water before putting in the clothes — that makes a great deal of difference.

No matter how many antique dealers you call, you won't get a true value of Aunt Mollie's tea set or the blanket chest you found in an attic. Dealer's can't appraise what they can't see. Ask a dealer what his or her appraisal fee is, then gather several antiques for the dealer's eye; many items can be appraised for selling or insurance value within one hour — appraisers usually charging by the hour.

Don't be a meal for mosquitoes. Before a backyard picnic, don't water the lawn for at least 24 hours. If there's no breeze on a muggy day, bring out a large electric fan to drive away the mosquitoes. Experts claim white or light-colored clothing is less attractive to these insects; so is rough-textured fabric. And don't use perfumes, shave lotion or other highly scented cosmetics in mosquito territory.

* * *

When your cozy new sweater looks like wool but is really acrylic, give it tender loving care if it's washable. Use a delicate cycle for washing and tumble dry at the lowest temperature to avoid heat-set wrinkles. To prevent pilling caused by rubbing against other clothing in the laundry, turn the sweater wrong side out. Once pilling appears, shave it off with an electric shaver . . . easy does it!

Get All Your Shots Long Before Trip

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

If you haven't had any shots for some time and think you may need several, start out right now to see what's required. You're almost certan to meet someone at just about any tropical resort who has paid a lot of money for a vaction and is stuck out of the water because of a reaction to a smallpox shot.

If you're interested in having your own guide to shots required for visiting various countries around the world, a free booklet, Immunization — A Guide for International Travellers, is available from the medical services branch of Health and Welfare Canada.

But even after you've done what you can at home to defend your health don't throw away your common sense when you take off for your destination.

For about the first 24 hours your body is trying to get used to perspiring without losing too much salt. You can help by eating light meals, drinking extra fluids and adding a little extra salt to your food.

And don't try to get that super tan in just one day. Especially if you've never been under the tropical sun before.

Health and Welfare Canada has also compiled these hints for travellers heading towards a tropical climate:

Stick to meat and fish that have been well cooked and are served hot. Possible problem foods include salads, raw vegetables, cold dishes, cold desserts and all watermelon.

As far as drinks go, stick to the internationally known bottled ones that you are familiar with. Hot tea and coffee are usually no problem and undiluted citrus fruit juices are okay if you prepare them yourself.

Watch out for the water.

With milk, stick to canned evaporated, condensed or powdered. Anything else may not have been pasteurized and should be boiled first.

When it comes to swimming in tropical destinations be careful of fresh water streams and ponds. They can be a source of serious illness.

And when you discover that perfect secluded beach, check it out with the locals. There may be a very good reason why no one else is swimming there. It could be that there are dangerously strong currents or sharks.

Who wants to end a vacation as the subject for Jaws III?

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Blair Shaw, psychologist; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Powell: One of my best friends is in a lot of trouble. She's 16 and pregnant. She's been going out with my next door neighbor now for 11 months. Everyone I know doesn't like him. He's a filthy looking guy. He never washes his hair or brushes his teeth. He steals and runs away all the time.

She's six months pregnant and they plan to keep the child. Her parents weren't shocked when they found out and I don't think they care. His parents say he has to marry her when he finishes school, but that won't solve the problem. He's 16, too, and they're growing up too fast and the wrong way.

Answer: You have made some very valid points about the problems faced by two teenagers who are about to become parents.

They need help in making certain decisions now about the pregnancy and marriage. That help should be from a counsellor experienced in helping young people solve problems. In the meantime, the best thing you can do is to be understanding and kind and a good friend and urge them to get help. They have to make the final choice about marriage and keeping the baby.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I am a 17-year-old girl and would like to know if anyone can define love. I think that I am in love with a 23-year-old boy, but I'm not sure.

I broke down and cried and I told him I really cared for him. He went out and got really drunk. He and a friend came over and his friend asked me if I was in love, and I broke down and started crying and said "yes." Then my guy told me he really did love me, and he began to cry.

Now he has gone away. I won't go out with other guys because all guys look like him and remind me of him. I know that's not fair but I feel very hurt. Now I sit up nights writing poems about love. Do you think I made a mistake by saying what my feelings were?

Answer: I hope they are good poems. Whether they are will probably depend on whether you understand that the pain you have suffered was more intense because you fell in love, a kind of loving which is involuntary.

All that crying and getting drunk was tragic at the time, but don't you find it comic in retrospect? I would define the kind of love you need as the kind about which you can laugh at yourself and still feel a whole and unhurt person. If you want to read some definitions of love, try The Four Loves, by C. S. Lewis.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 16-year-old girl who needs some help. I have been going with an 18-year-old boy for six months. I love him very much.

My problem is, every time he leaves me or I leave him (vacation or if he's busy with a family outing), I'm worried that I'm going to lose him. I don't know why, because everything is great and he's said he won't leave me. But still I worry, and because of this I don't have any fun when he's not around. I just sit around and feel miserable.

Answer: I think that you are feelig a bit insecure about your relationship. This is a natural feeling. When we have something that is special, we often feel that something may happen that will end it.

One way of dealing with your feelings is to talk to your boyfriend about them. In a relationship, the reassurance has to come from each other. To help your relationship, I advise you not to sit around and feel miserable. If your boyfriend knew this, it could make him feel uncomfortable about spending time with his family. This would be unfair.

Vancouver Style Very Casual

VANCOUVER (CP) — When fashion designer Monique Gabin arrived in this West Coast city 15 years ago from France, she found Vancouver fashion very unfashionable.

Things are changing, she says, but Vancouver still is a very casual city.

"I had to change my attitude to dressing quite a lot," she says.

She and her husband, Edward Poole, opened a small boutique in West Vancouver and stocked it with expensive, chic clothing for the elite.

Ms. Gabin designed the garments and Poole created them. He studied tailoring and pattern-making in Paris, although he was born in Winnipeg.

After tiring of the hassles and cost of buying imported fabric and trimmings, the pair decided to move from couture to trendier ready-to-wear.

Now they have six stores in the Vancouver area carrying a variety of lines including such labels as Geoffrey Beene, Anne Klein and Mary Farrin.

Ms. Gabin has her own theories on how women should dress. She believes every woman owes it to herself to look her best "but I don't think she should make a career out of it."

"It's a disease to be obsessed with clothes. She should organize her wardrobe, put on what she likes in the morning and then forget about it."

She says she thinks women "should feel comfortable about moving from something very tailored one day to something very fun and feminine the next."

Males Flightier?

NEW YORK (AP) — Men's clothing is as vulnerable now to fashion changes as women's clothing, says Marvin Blemenfeld of April-Marcus, a merchandising consulting firm. "The situation now in men's fashions is similar to that in the women's field: An item is either the greatest or it's dead," he says.

Retired? Not For Long

TORONTO (CP) — A group of retired tradesmen will prove they still have what it takes to do their jobs.

The Senior Citizens' Maintenance Committee, comprising retired plumbers, electricians, carpenters, tinsmiths and heating technicians, will perform minor household repairs at cheaper rates for senior citizens living primarily on government pensions.

The idea originated with the seniors club of Local 46, United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, said club president Tom Tomlinson.

The committee recently received an $18,455 New Horizons grant, enabling them to purchase tools and supplies to start the business.

The service should be operating by February, he said.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: When my 27-year-old daughter and I went shopping, she saw a blouse she loved, but they didn't have it in her size. Knowing how much she wanted it, I made several trips to the store trying to get it in her size. I finally succeeded and got it for her as a gift. (She knew how much trouble I had gone to to get the blouse.)

She and her husband (he's 29) came over to get it, and she tried it on for him. He said nothing, but two days later she called, in tears, saying her husband thought it was too sheer. (It WAS quite sheer, but not nearly as sheer as many I wear.)

I suggested she wear a slip under it, but she said her husband didn't want other men to see through her clothes — that he had forbidden her to keep it, and that was that!

I was furious and told her I wouldn't return it.

What is your opinion of this situation?

ENRAGED

DEAR ENRAGED: I think you're making a mountain out of a molehill (or maybe two, for all I know). If your daughter allows her husband to impose his wishes on her, that's between them.

Too bad you went to so much trouble to get the blouse. Tell your daughter that if she can't wear it, return it. The whole fuss strikes me as sheer nonsense.

DEAR ABBY: When a person confesses to adultery, is he or she obliged to provide the details?

I am the wronged wife, and when I demanded to know when, why, where and with whom, I was called nosy.

NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: If it's your intention to forgive and forget, the less you know the less you'll have to forget.

DEAR ABBY: I asked a friend for advice about my problem and she said, "Write to Abby," so here goes:

I am engaged to marry the son of a minister. (I'll call my fiance Timothy.) Timothy's father, without even discussing it with us, has assumed that he will perform our marriage ceremony.

Timothy and I prefer to have his father sit with his mother at the wedding and be a guest with no official duties to perform.

Our problem is how to tell Timothy's father without offending him. He's a wonderful person, but he's very persuasive and we're afraid he might try to talk us into letting him have his way.

WEDDING BELLS

DEAR BELLS: It's your wedding, and you have the right to do your own thing. Timothy should tell his father respectfully, lovingly, but firmly of your decision. And the sooner the better.

No Point Being Angry Over It

your health

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

About 12 years ago I had half of my stomach taken out for bleeding ulcers. I now hear that this is no longer done. I wonder if all of this could have been avoided. I get unpleasant symptoms and it makes me mad when I think that maybe I didn't need the operation. — Mr. T.

Dear Mr. T.:

Being mad and confused does not contribute to your present health and may, in a measure, be responsible for some of your unpleasant symptoms.

It is true that new concepts in treatment have made it easier to control the symptoms, progression and complications of stomach ulcers and duodenal ulcers.

Diet is no longer as restricted as it used to be. A new drug, cimetidine, has added considerably to the control and cure of many cases of ulcer.

Unfortunately, this particular drug was not available at the time of your operation. It is true that it might have prevented it. This sort of situation occurs many times, as medicine and science progress. Thousands of difficult infections that are now easily controlled with antibiotics were impossible to control before. The same is true of vaccinations. You should not look back at what was at the time an obvious life-saving experience and be resentful because what was later discovered was not known then.

It must be noted that even today, with the new advances in the treatment of duodenal and gastric ulcers, surgery is still performed in selected cases as a life-saving technique when there is uncontrollable pain, severe bleeding and the impending possibility of the perforation of an ulcer.

I gave birth to my first child two months ago. I was in labor for a long time. The doctor and a consultant decided to give me a drug to make the labor go faster. Is this a dangerous thing to do? Could it have affected the baby? — Mrs. E.E.W.

Dear Mrs. W.:

The fact that your doctor and a consultant both agreed that inducing labor was necessary should relieve you of anxiety. When there is long-delayed labor and when continuation of the pregnancy presents a distinct treat to the baby or to the mother, the induction of labor is vital to both.

I assume that your baby and you are both in excellent health. Otherwise, you'd have mentioned it. Since this is so, it is obvious that their decision was a correct one. At this time, there is no possible reason why you should anticipate that you or your child will be in any way affected by your doctor's management of your case.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

If a title were required for this deal, it might well be, in the words of the poet, "Oh, what a tangled web we weave." The hand was played in the 1976 Vanderbilt Cup Championships. Sitting South was John Solodor, of New York City.

East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

Solodor's four-heart rebid was quite a drastic overbid — or, as the experts put it, euphemistically, "He took a rosy view of his hand."

Faced with a difficult choice of leads, West came up with a most unorthodox one: the jack of diamonds. This was covered by dummy's queen, and the trick was captured by East's ace. To trick two East led a low spade, and when South put up the king, West allowed the king to win. To trick three South played his remaining spade, West taking his ace.

West now cashed the diamond king, East discarding a spade. On this trick South played his eight of diamonds. The nine of diamonds was led next — and East made one of those mistakes which everybody makes once in a while: he discarded another spade, instead of trumping for what would have been the setting trick.

South won the trick with the ten-spot, picked up the outstanding trumps in four leads, and then led his four of diamonds to dummy's seven. On the board's fifth diamond South discarded his losing club, and fulfilled his contract.

Why did East not trump his partner's lead of the diamond nine? As East explained it in the post-mortem analysis, he was absolutely certain that West's opening lead had been from the K-J-10-9 of that suit. Hence East was certain that West's nine of diamonds was either going to win the trick or be trumped by South if the latter had no more diamonds. Therefore, as East put it, why unguard his ten of trumps when the guarded ten might eventually produce a trump trick?

And, in conclusion. East turned to West and inquired: "How come you made the misleading opening lead to the diamond jack?"

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, November 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go slow, play waiting game, line up objectives, priorities, straighten out business and personal activities. You've made commitment — if single, your marital status could be subject of debate. Married or single, you get facts of life, financial and emotional.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You're asked to take stand. Key now is to steer away from direct confrontation. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently — and so does the number 9. Accent on employment, nutrition and general health. You can complete an important task.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creativity, impulse, emotion and "falling in love." You get to heart of matters and could meet a "sensational" person. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure in scenario. Imprint style, lead rather than follow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hunch is valid—follow through, teach, learn, make amends to parent or authority figure for recent dispute. You can afford to be generous, at least with time and gratitude. Emphasis on home, basic security, building materials.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be versatile without scattering your efforts. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Humor and social activity are spotlighted. Accent on short trips, brothers, sisters, special calls and alarms. Yes, it will be clarified!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on breaking through, getting rid of red tape, finding ways of cashing in on special knowledge, ability. Money picture is brighter than originally anticipated. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure in key ways.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Element of personal magnetism is very much in evidence. Be analytical. Don't be satisfied merely to know that something happened—find out why it occurred. You have marvelous opportunity for new start in new direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Change of residence, coping with domestic situation — these could be on agenda. Someone has privileged information for you. Be receptive — and discreet. Taurus, Aries and Libra figure prominently — so does the number 6.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romantic haze [illegible] ates — enjoy, but avoid self-deception. Protect yourself in emotional clinches. Visit one confined to home or hospital. If considerate, you will be more than repaid. Know it and respond accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on climbing to a more elevated position. Another Capricorn — and a Cancer — could figure prominently. One who has authority to loosen roadblocks could become an ally. Know it and don't burn your bridges.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communication, creativity, change, travel, publishing and education figue prominently. Libra could be very much a part of scenario. Finishing touches are featured. You could close book on major project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If persistent, you break through, possibly to pay dirt. Leo is in picture. Strive for independent, creative stance. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Keep promises to member of opposite sex. Welcome new contacts.

IF NOVEMBER 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, introspective, moody, temperamental and lonely in a crowd. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles in your life. In 1979, you will work harder, be more productive, more fulfilled — and have more money. You went through an emotional wringer this past September. You're on road to recovery. You are reunited with young persons in December. You'll be vibrant, happy — and you could fall madly in love.

"Here's a tough one for you, Dad," said Beryl. "We asked the new teacher how old she is, and she told us to figure it out as homework."

Paul smiled. "Did you get it?" he asked. "I guess she gave you some clues."

"Sure, but that doesn't seem to help," the girl replied. "She said it's the reverse of the digits of what was four times the difference between the digits of her age four years ago."

Paul got it. What about you?

I am personable, very warm and strong. Would like to meet a very attractive sharp personable gal, 20-34 that I can be proud of, and introduce to my friends, etc. Must appreciate an intelligent mature person. I have no trouble meeting people, but this person will be very special to me, one that I can invest time, emotion, concern and perhaps grow to love. If this interests you, please answer. I will telephone you and when we are both comfortable, arrange dinner. Remember, nothing ventured, nothing gained. Children? Victoria Press Box 564.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If nnu have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Christmas Ideas for Gardeners

hilda beastall

Gardening information sought at this season by readers includes ideas for a gift to a friend or relative with the same general interests.

If the person lives nearby, it shouldn't be too difficult. One knows if the friend shuns winter gardening for instance because of cold feet, cold hands, or the lack of suitable headgear.

Or the friend may be constantly complaining of poor soil, lack of sufficient water hose for summer watering, or of the need for a small garden cart for moving composting material to the heap and the compost soil to the remainder of the garden.

On a grander scale, a reader may have in mind the purchase of a "real big gift." What could we suggest?

Well, expanding our minds a bit, we come up with a garden tiller, a prefabricated tool shed, or a 10-yard truckload of barnyard manure or of mushroom compost.

And still no mention of books or plants?

These are the two gardening gifts which occur easily to most people.

We feel that the selection of a book takes a close knowledge of the friend's specific interests in the garden to be able to choose just the one that will be appreciated. Some people have this happy knack of selecting the right book for their friend because of their own sensitivity.

Several millions of Canadians buy gift plants in pots for Christmas gifts. These are beautiful in the stores and have taken great skill to raise to the perfection that we see displayed. Some idea of the home environment helps to guide the final selection.

Outdoor garden plant selection for a friend is well taken care of with nursery or garden centre gift certificates. Cash is not always directed to the purpose the giver has in mind.

For friends at a distance a mailed gift is the answer — one which cannot be damaged (if properly packed) in last-minute postal scrambles: a carefully chosen gardening book (this can be historical, not necessarily "how-to-do" type), an article of gardening clothing suited to the recipient's weather, wired or tie-on plant identification tags, packets of seeds you feel can be grown, or packets of dried herbs you have grown.

Label these clearly and give a recipe or two for use. One recipient wrote the donor the following summer that "nothing germinated" from the (dried) herb packets. They were labelled with the herb names and their uses but not as "dried" herbs.

The interesting items that traditionally are called "stocking stuffers" are often the hit of the season.

Suggestions and ideas to trigger further thought are the following: a garden notebook of size suited to writing up while in the garden (should have a stiff cover or be attached to a smooth piece of wood), a weather-proof pencil for marking plant labels, a packet or two of desirable seeds, dried herbs either bought locally or home prepared, a 12-page compost guide (with illustrations) bought from our local Project Recycle on Borden Street for 30 cents or so (guaranteed to make any real gardener more enthusiastic and successful), a membership in a garden club near the recipient.

For local gardeners there is a garden club in each area of Greater Victoria out to Sooke and Sidney, as well as specialty groups within the Victoria Horticultural Society.

There must be other possibilities for gifts to gardeners; these suggestions should bring them out.

Bendrodt Idled While Cabinet Sits

Acting Attorney-General Allan Williams said Thursday he has asked chief provincial court judge Lawrence Goulet not to assign any cases to Judge Erik Bendrodt until cabinet makes a decision on his case.

"I have no authority to direct Judge Goulet as to what he is to do, but I understand he will not be assigning cases to Judge Bendrodt until the affair is completed," Williams said.

Bendrodt was the subject of a hearing earlier this month by the Judicial Council of B.C. after he was seen picking up a teen-aged prostitute. It was disclosed at the hearing he is an alcoholic.

The council said the judge's actions were regrettable, but questioned whether he should be removed from the bench for a single moral lapse, and recommended to cabinet that no further action be taken.

Williams said the cabinet discussed the recommendation Thursday, but will not be making a decision until after it studies a transcript of the inquiry sometime next week.

He said the cabinet has no authority to fire Bendrodt, unless the judicial council recommends such action be taken. The cabinet can ask the council to have a second look at the case.

"One of the difficulties we have had about this particular case is there has been too much speculation and hypothesis and it will be dealt with when we have all the facts and not before," Williams said.

Earlier, he said he does not like the idea of having an alcoholic judge on the B.C. bench but added there is nothing he can do until cabinet makes a decision.

UN Opens Centre At UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new department of the United Nations opened Thursday with headquarters here and six other regional offices around the world.

The centre, located at the University of British Columbia, is called the United Nations Audio-Visual Centre on Human Settlements — Visual Habitat for short.

It will distribute films about human settlements to countries all over the world and will provide technical and financial assistance to developing countries wishing to make more films.

"What we have set up is a a world-wide film distribution program," said Vision Habitat director Michael Hayward, a 30-year veteran of the UN office of public information.

"We have six regional offices arund the world, in Nairobi, Dakar, Bangkok, Mexico City, Geneva and Amman, Jordan, but from Vancouver we will serve the whole of Canada and the U.S.," said deputy director Jim Carney.

The 232 films on human settlement problems and solutions produced for the UN Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat), held here in 1976, will form the main part of Vision Habitat's film bank.

'Frisco Egyptian Consulate Firebombed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Egyptian consulate was firebombed early today and a frightened security guard who spoke only Arabic held police at bay for nearly two hours with a rifle and grenade.

The firebomb shattered the grill-covered wood and glass front door of the embassy shortly after 3 a.m. PST.

A few minutes before a male caller claiming to be a member of the Jewish Defense League telephoned United Press International and Associated Press and warned of the bombing.

The caller said:

"Since Egypt's aim is the total destruction of Israel, any Israeli retreat from the vital Sinai buffer zone would be suicide. Never again."

The news agencies called police who were unaware of the firebombing incident. They went to the embassy and discovered the damage to the front door.

Two security guards inside the building came out but a third, apparently frightened and unable to speak English, refused to come out.

Police cordoned off the area and an embassy official later came to the building and talked the guard into surrendering his weapons.

Envoy Favors N-Arms Paring In W. Europe

The balance of nuclear forces must be maintained in Europe but hopefully at a reduced level, West German consul-general Schacco von Estorff said in Victoria Thursday.

The interests of world peace would best be served by a reduction of forces by both Russia and the United States, he told a Victoria Rotary Club luncheon at The Empress.

Von Estorff, who is stationed at the West German consulate in Vancouver, said talks are continuing in an effort to reduce the level of military forces.

But the West must be cautious because of Russia's superior military position, he said.

For example, the land mass under Soviet control in Europe is eight times as large as that under control of the western forces.

In addition, Russia is only 400 miles from the West German border, while the U.S. is 4,000 miles from the confrontation zone.

Russia has superior conventional forces and the advantage of being able to move forces by land. The U.S. must move forces by sea or by air but has the advantage — for now — of superiority in some nuclear weapons systems.

Von Estorff said peace seems assured as long as both powers maintain a balance.

Neither side has the ability to knock out its foe with one nuclear strike, he said.

Because retaliatory raids would be devastating, there is little likelihood of a serious outbreak — although constant vigilence is required.

Despite the emergence of other nations, the U.S. and the Soviet Union continue to dominate the world scene and will do so for many years to come.

On the economic front, the Federal Republic of Germany (West Germany) is committed to the idea of European co-operation through the European Community.

He said West Germany would like to see the present membership of nine western nations enlarged to 12 by including Spain, Portugal and Greece.

As the major exporting nation in this group, West Germany has a responsiblity to help other European nations to export to his country.

He said Bonn is considering the problem and is attempting to achieve a better balance of trade.

Unification of East and West Germany remains a national aim, he said, although there has been no progress on this since the country was divided at the end of the Second World War.

Guyana: Calif. Cult's Last Act

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Murder and mass suicide in Guyana, final acts in a religious sect's weird fantasy of salvation, added the latest bizarre chapter to California's history of cult-inspired horror.

Rev. Jim Jones, who commanded his followers' destruction and died himself in the carnage, took his cult to the South American country from California and thus takes his place on a long list of demoniac "prophets" symbolized by mass murderer Charles Manson.

The cults — political and religious — seem to bloom each year in the state, almost like its abundant flowers.

What force draws the leaders and followers here? Some experts in the growing study of cults say the magnet is the unremitting sunshine, luring immigrants from colder climes.

"People come to California because of the warm climate and political liberalism," said Christie Kiefer, an anthropology professor at the University of California at San Francisco. "They come looking for something new. Usually, they are disappointed with life itself."

Dr. Charles Glock, a sociologist at the University of California at Berkeley, sees the answer in the free lifestyle that has grown up in San Francisco.

"People who move west are looking for new lives," he said. "Los Angeles is a sort of square city. But in San Francisco they know they can walk down the street naked and painted blue and no one will look up.

"There's an old saying that you leave your religion behind when you cross the Rockies. But then they come here and find a new kind of religion."

"People who move in from out of state are a little more lonely and searching for roots," said Dr. Margaret Singer, a clinical psychologist at the University of California at Berkeley.

The fanatics of the Symbionese Liberation Army who died in a suicidal shootout with police were kids from the East and Midwest, she said.

Charles Manson's followers believed he was Jesus Christ. Jim Jones' converts saw him as God, a divine father who would lead them to heaven on earth.

"When the group gets to a certain size," Singer said, "the leader starts telling the group that the outside world is against them. A kind of paranoia grows up."

Singer said the most powerful gurus become substitute parents to their lonely converts, and if the leader begins to believe his own myth of divinity, he must see his followers as "lesser than himself."

Third Vietnam Vessel Capsizes

Times News Services

KUALA LUMPUR — A boat loaded with 217 Vietnamese refugees capsized in the South China Sea off Malaysia on Thursday night in the third Vietnamese boat accident in a 48-hour period, Malaysian police sources reported today.

All but three of the refugees swam to safety, the sources said. The bodies of two of the latest victims have been recovered.

There was no indication of why the boat overturned off Kampong Bari, about 300 kilometres northeast of here, but the sea in the area was reported to have been rough at the time.

A boat with about 250 persons aboard hit a sand bar in the Trengganu estuary, 290 kilometres northeast of Kuala Lumpur on Wednesday. There were 61 survivors and 100 bodies have been found so far.

On Thursday, a boat with 43 people hit a sand bar and capsized about 1,000 metres from the shore at Pantai Timun, 340 kilometres northeast of here. All aboard clung to two large rubber floats and got ashore.

Meanwhile, Malaysia says the United States has promised to take in all the Vietnamese refugees aboard the freighter Hai Hong who cannot find refuge in other foreign countries.

Canada has selected 604 of the Hai Hong refugees. The first group of 170 depart by Canadian military aircraft Saturday.

The remaining will be airlifted in three groups at an interval of two days. France has agreed to take 221 of the refugees. The French embassy in Kuala Lumpur is making arrangements with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugee to move them to France by Wednesday.

The Malaysian government has said those refugees on board the Hai Hong not taken by third countries will have to remain on the ship which will be ordered back to open waters.

The government has not decided on a deadline when the ship must leave Malaysian waters.

EVIL TRIANGLE ON THE PROWL?

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — With some people worrying that a malevolent force is at work, a special federal crash team is attempting to determine why four small airplanes crashed in the same geographic area within a 50-hour span.

"I think the Bermuda Triangle has moved north," said Kathy Strzesak, a clerk at the Embry-Riddle flight school. "I'll tell you what, it scares me to death."

Eight persons were killed in the crashes, which began Monday when a twin-engine Piper Apache crashed at 7:04 p.m. At 8:30 p.m., a Cessna 172 owned by the Embry-Riddle flight school crashed. At 9:40 p.m. Tuesday, a Cessna Skymaster went down as it neared the Daytona Beach airport.

On the third consecutive night, a Piper Cherokee with three aboard rammed into the woods near the rural community of Osteen. The pilot, Kenneth Parsons, 38, was killed, but two passengers survived.

Control tower supervisor Al Ensell rejected the idea of a Bermuda Triangle.

"People are talking about a Daytona Triangle and all that. I don't think it's anything but a bunch of bad coincidences," he said.

Fog and rain could have contributed to the first three crashes — the planes were using instruments to guide them to the airport. But the Wednesday crash occurred during clear weather.

Fighter Deal With China Irks Moscow

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Soviet government, in a move reflecting deep concern about possible acquisition by Peking of advanced Western weapons, has warned Britain against selling Harrier jet fighters to China.

The warning was contained in a letter Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev sent Monday to British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

According to British officials, Brezhnev's letter spoke of serious but unspecified "consequences" involved in sales of British military equipment to China.

Callaghan's answer is expected in the next few days. But he is not likely to yield to Soviet pressure, as he publicly stated Tuesday that his government "would not allow our relations with any other country to be dictated by a third party."

China is reported to want to purchase about 90 Harrier vertical-takeoff fighters in a multimillion-dollar deal. Each plane costs about $8 million.

The deal would have to be approved by a committee composed of representatives of NATO countries and Japan that reviews sales of advanced Western technology to Communist countries. No objections were expected from the Paris-based unit known as Cocom.

The Russians cautioned the West last summer against supplying weapons to China, arguing that the Peking government was a "serious threat" to peace since it is involved in "direct expansionist actions."

The harrier jet, used by U.S. forces, is viewed as well suited for Chinese purposes. It needs no air base for operations and could be successfully deployed in the rugged terrain of northern China along the Soviet border. It can land on a variety of surfaces such as grass, tarmac, concrete, dirt and gravel strips, snow and ice-covered runways.

The aircraft is the West's only operational fixed-wing vertical takeoff and landing strike fighter. It also can be operated from ship decks.

China's Vice Premier Wang Chen reiterated Peking's enthusiasm for the aircraft during his visit to Britain earlier this month. During Wang's visit, the two countries drew up a plan for massive expansion of bilateral trade with the aim of reaching the annual figure of $10 billion by 1985.

The Harrier sale itself could hardly tilt the current Sino-Soviet strategic balance, which is overwhelmingly in Moscow's favor. But the deal, estimated to total about $700 million, would provide a boost to the ailing British aircraft industry.

BEIRUT BUZZED

BEIRUT (AP) — Low-flying jet fighters buzzed Beirut Thursday, drawing anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian guerrillas and Syrian peacekeeping forces. The rightist Voice of Lebanon radio station claimed they were Israeli jets.

Witnesses saw two planes swoop in from the sea just above rooftop level. They overflew beachside areas in Beirut's Moslem sector as well as a refugee camp that houses Palestinian guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat's headquarters.

Cubans Plead

HAVANA (Reuter) — Cuban exile leaders Thursday sought a meeting with U.S. President Carter to expedite the entry into the United States of thousands of political prisoners in Cuba.

Cuba on Wednesday promised to free 3,600 prisoners provided the United States would accept those who wished to go there, a number estimated at about 2,000.

STATELY MEDITATION

LONDON (AP) — Followers of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi have bought Mentmore Towers, the dilapidated stately home where the Earl of Rosebery auctioned off family treasures and lowly coathangers 1½ years ago.

"We badly needed a large place to use as a residential study centre," said Vesey Crichton, 29, head of the British wing of the maharishi's India-based Age of Enlightenment meditation movement.

"We paid £248,[illegible] (About $500,000) which I think was very cheap," said Crichton. "We are all thrilled. Every Englishman loves stately homes, don't they."

Border TV Stations Gird To Fight Canada Tax Law

WASHINGTON (CP) — The long-simmering dispute over the Canadian tax curb on border television advertising is heating up again as U.S. broadcasters prepare their case for action they feel the United States should take against Canada.

At a public hearing next week, U.S. border station owners will try to prove that the Canadian law is discriminatory, unreasonable and unjustifiable.

They also will tell the hearing committee headed by special trade representative Robert Strauss what they feel President Carter should do to have Canada change the law.

At issue is a 1976 Canadian tax regulation which says Canadian companies may not make tax deductions for television advertising which is directed primarily at a Canadian audience but placed on a U.S. station.

Prior to that time, 10 per cent of total Canadian television advertising revenues of about $200 million went to the United States. Canada feels the money would be better spent in Canada.

So far, all attempts by the U.S. government and the border television stations to have Canada change its position on the issue have failed.

Canada has stood by its position that the issue is not negotiable.

In August, 15 U.S. stations — less than one-half of the 35 television stations operating along the Canadian border — filed a petition under the U.S. Trade Act seeking increased duties or other import restrictions to force Canada to change the law.

The case is somewhat unusual, officials said Wednesday, because it deals with a service, not a commodity such as copper or zinc.

At a news conference in August, representatives of the stations said what they really wanted was for Canada to negotiate a compromise on the issue.

The Canadian side will be presented by representatives of small, private television operations, including Toronto's City Television and CHAN-TV of Vancouver.

U.S. SET TO TUG ON PAY REINS

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. government is considering taking steps to tighten its voluntary price guidelines for businesses, officials confirmed Thursday.

The administation may put some limit on the amount of profits a firm might earn if it says it cannot follow the president's general price standards that requires firms to hold their price increases to one-half percent below their average price increases in 1976 or 1977.

But officials said that no final decisions have been made yet by the Council on Wage and Price Stability and that any change of this substantive a nature also would have to be approved by the high-level Economic Policy Group.

The council on wage and price stability has long been concerned, however, that companies are finding it easier to observe a rule the administation put forward as an exception, not an alternative, to its general deceleration standard.

That exception says if a company cannot reduce its prices below the 1976-77 average (say because of uncontrollable cost increases), it must make sure that its profits as a percentage of sale — the so-called profit margin — does not increase.

Officials say that they worry if too many companies choose the control profit margins, rather than prices, the administration will have a harder time reducing the rate of inflation to its goal of 6 or 6.5 percent in 1979.

As a result, officials are discussing ways to change the profit margin exception to make it less attractive to companies.

Nazi Trials Dragged Out

LUBLIN, Poland (AP) — Gas chambers, crematory ovens and mounds of human ashes at Majdanek death camp are sickening reminders of the holocaust. About 1,000 kilometres to the west, the trial of 14 Nazi camp guards for Second World War atrocities here drags into its fourth year.

"It's a phantom trial, a classic case of stalling," Professor Czeslaw Pilichowski, chief of Poland's war-crimes investigation commission, said in an interview.

He reflected the anger and frustration of a number of Polish officials over defence delaying tactics at the Majdanek trial in Duesseldorf, West Germany.

The trial passes its third anniversary Sunday and court officials say the verdict is at least another yeer away.

Polish officials say 360,000 men, women and children were gassed, shot, hanged, drowned, beaten or starved to death at Majdanek between 1941 and 1944. Victims came from 28 countries, but the majority were rounded up during the Nazi occupation of Poland.

Pilichowski said the German prosecutors have conducted an excellent case against the 14 defendants, who face maximum sentences of life imprisonment.

"But the defence lawyers have delayed the trial with a variety of time-consuming protest motions," he said. "The case is certain to drag on into [illegible]."

The controversial West German statute of limitations for war crimes, which would expire Dec. 31, 1979 unless it's extended, has no effect on the trial. It applies to German war-crime suspects not under investigation or indictment by the deadline.

Pilichowski criticized the defence lawyers' tactics of badgering Polish witnesses who survived Majdanek. The harassment is so bad that many survivors have refused to appear in person and instead gave written depositions, he said.

He said 20 Poles have gone to Duesseldorf, 10 are slated to go and 770 have given the court written statements.

The court has had five sessions in Poland, including visits to the camp site near Lublin, an industrial city of 250,000 residents.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market shook off a prime rate increase and managed a slight rise in thin post-Thanksgiving trading today.

Analysts said the market took little notice of the news that many major banks had raised their prime lending rates to 11½ per cent from 11 per cent.

And investors got good news from Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, who returned from a tour of the Mideast with a prediction that crude oil prices might not rise as substantially as had been predicted. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets to discuss a price hike next month.

Howl of Protest Greets Wolf Program

A campaign to stop Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf from approving the spending of close to $500,000 towards shooting and poisoning wolves in northern B.C. is growing on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The Western Canada Chapter of the Sierra Club is sponsoring a public hearing next week in Vancouver to discuss wolf control.

Sierra spokesman Rosemary Fox said a similar meeting may be held in Victoria at a later date.

He is Dr. David Mech, a wildlife research biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Division of Endangered Wildlife Research.

The Citizens Association for Predator Conservation has also has asked its members in Victoria and the island to write Bawlf urging him to defer the program until scientific data has been collected on wolf-caribou relations.

The government program is designed to reduce the wolf population in the Skeena and Ominica regions in an attempt to protect livestock and increase the caribou population.

The save-the-wolf campaign was launched after details of a government memorandum on a wolf control program became known early in October.

The memo revealed in some places more than 60 per cent of the wolf population would be wiped out even though government biologists appear to have inadequate information on which to base the program.

The memo indicates that northern B.C. ranchers lose only one or two per cent of their livestock annually to predators such as wolves and coyotes.

Furthermore, the memo admits there is no proof that wolves are responsible for the decline of cariboo herds.

A spokesman for the CAPC said concerned citizens mistrust the motives of the wolf control program.

"It will be costly to the public and benefit a few," he said.

According to a B.C. wildlife branch memo, most of the wolf killing will be done by placing poison baits that include sodium cyanide, but wolves will also be shot by helicopters.

Producer Dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Kamil Y. Yarmatov, a film producer from Soviet Uzbekistan, has died at 75, Tass reported.

BENNETT TO OTTAWA

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is heading for next week's first ministers' economic conference in Ottawa with some reservations about the Trudeau government's ability to establish policy.

He reiterated his concern that a government at the end of its mandate is unable to act effectively but the Ottawa discussions on tariffs, quotas and expansion of industry are of vital interest to B.C.

"We'll be outlining not only our concerns for Canada but how B.C. can be better served within the economic framework in this country."

The trip isn't all work for Bennett. He plans to take in Sunday's Grey Cup football game in Toronto.

3 NEW MINISTERS

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a major reorganization of his cabinet today, appointing three new ministers, shuffling others and creating a new board of economic development ministers. The new board will be composed of 11 ministries, headed by President of the Board of Economic Development Ministers Robert Andras, formerly president of the treasury board.

New faces in the cabinet include Pierre de Bane (Matane) named minister of supply and services and John Reid, 41, (Kenora-Rainy-River) named minister of federal-provincial relations.

Martin O'Connell, 52, (Scarborough-East), was named labor minister, a post he held briefly in 1972 before being defeated in that year's general election. He was reelected in 1974.

Andre Ouellet has been named minister of public works. He will remain as Urban Affairs Minister until the department is disbanded at the end of next March.

In addition, he will retain responsibility for Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the National Capital Commission, which oversees government holdings in the Ottawa area.

The urban affairs ministry is being dropped to save money and to limit federal activity in areas that overlap with the provinces.

Marc Lalonde, formerly minister of federal-provincial relations, was named minister of justice.

Alastair Gillespie retains the energy portfolio and takes charge of science and technology.

Senator Joe Guay, who held the revenue portfolio, was dropped from the cabinet as was Jean-Pierre Goyer, the former supply and services minister, who has said he will not run in the general election expected in the spring.

Otto Lang, who has been acting justice minister since the summer resignation of Ron Basford, keeps his portfolios of transport and the wheat board.

Senior ministers who kept their portfolios in the shuffle were Don Jamieson in external affairs, Jean Chretien in finance, Allan MacEachen as deputy prime minister and president of the privy council, Hugh Faulkner in northern affairs, Eugene Whelan in agriculture, Bud Cullen in manpower, Romeo LeBlanc in fisheries and Barney Danson in defence.

Other ministers not involved in the shuffle were

Statistics Clobber $

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar plunged nearly half a cent against its U.S. counterpart in early trading on money markets today following news that Canada's merchandise trade surplus fell sharply in October.

The dollar opened at 84.88 U.S. cents, down 45-100 of a cent from Thursday's close of 85.33 U.S. cents. It was the first drop below 85 U.S. cents in a week.

The decline follows Statistics Canada's report today that the merchandise trade surplus for October was $91 million, compared with a $548-million surplus in September.

The government also reported exports to the U.S. — Canada's major trading partner — dropped 6.8 per cent to $3.04 billion in October, the first drop after four consecutive months of increases.

Food Boosts Index

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Consumer Price Index jumped one per cent in October because of higher food prices and the end of some provincial sales tax reductions introduced last spring, Statistics Canada reported today.

The 12-month inflation rate rose to 8.7 per cent from its September level of 8.6 per cent.

A revised consumer price index was used for the first time in calculating the October cost-of-living index.

Statistics Canada said the revision does not mean a break in its month-to-month series of changes in the inflation rate because September was used as a link month, with an index which would work under either system.

The basic change in this

Jonestown Deaths . . . 775 And Rising

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Searchers have found at least 775 bodies at the scene of the mass suicide-murder in the Guyanese jungle commune of a U.S. religious sect, almost twice as many as previously counted, the U.S. embassy here reported today.

The embassy said many of the newly-discovered bodies at the Jonestown commune were those of children huddled beneath their parents' remains.

They said investigators had been unable to determine the whereabouts of hundreds of camp residents who apparently were missing. It had been believed many fled the death ritual, hiding in the jungle. The grisly new discoveries gave the answer.

Embassy official Patricia Moser said that as of 1 p.m. today 485 bodies had been removed from the Jonestown agricultural settlement.

She said 20 more had been placed in body bags and a still-continuing hand count had located an additional 270.

Power Outages Bedevil Island

BOOK WORK'S the name of the game for B.C. Tel employees Marj Neal and Hal Hussey, shown here sitting on a small mountain of new telephone directories being readied for shipment by forklift driver Russ Morgan. New books will be out in all areas of Greater Victoria by Dec. 1 and for first time Saanich Peninsula residents will also get a copy of phone firm's first-ever neighborhood mini-directory that covers Sidney and North And Central Saanich.

An unidentified problem in the main power line from the mainland to Vancouver Island blacked out most of the southern island for periods ranging from 21 minutes to 4½ hours Thursday night and caused another brief outage this morning.

Thursday night's loss of power was the most widespread in recent years.

It plunged the entire capital region into darkness except for buildings with standby electric generators.

B.C. Hydro spokesman Dorothy Tupper said today power was lost from the mainland at 9:04 p.m. and the cause was still under investigation this morning.

The blackout affected Nanaimo and Port Alberni but Duncan and communities north of Nanaimo escaped.

Police departments recorded little disturbance as a result of the power loss — some broken windows by vandalism in the 700-block Yates and drug store burglaries in Saanich and Sidney — but the outage triggered a wave of phone calls to police and fire switchboards.

Electricity was back on in Oak Bay in just over 20 minutes and other areas were also gradually restored.

But it didn't come back on in Sooke until 1:30 a.m. because of additional problems.

Greater Victoria police reported remarkably few hassles.

People dining out ate by candlelight and at recreation centres they swam, skated and even curled by makeshift or emergency lighting.

At Eaton's, the doors closed a scant five minutes before the power failure. Then the emergency lighting came on and staff continued as usual.

The only case of vandalism the store suffered occurred when someone threw a rock through a window on the View Street side.

The Empress Hotel was plunged into darkness and one person was stuck in an

65 and Get Out Rule Opposed by Doctors

OTTAWA (CP) — The guillotine age limit of 65 for retirement has no basis in medical fact and should be banned, the Canadian Medical Association said Thursday.

In a brief to the special Senate committee on retirement policy, the association said work plays an important role in peoples' lives. To take work away from them "produces a void which may get filled by. . .ill health."

Elderly peoples were entitled to "autonomy, physical and mental health and the continuation of a good life so they were not cast off or institutionalized," said former association president Robert Goudreau.

"The guillotine age limit should be abandoned."

John Bennett, director of professional affairs for the association, said the retirement age of 65 was first introduced in 1884 by German Chancellor Otto von Bismarck for humanitarian reasons. Today reasons for mandatory retirement were strictly economic.

"When Bismarck introduced 65 as the age of retirement, it was a relatively hard age to obtain," Bennett added. Today many people aged 65 were healthy and able to work.

Bennett suggested many people may choose a shorter work week but a longer work life as an alternative to mandatory retirement at age 65.

POLICEMEN ARRESTED

REGINA (CP) — Three city police officers have been arrested and will face charges of break, entry and theft after a break-in at a city electrical shop Thursday.

Two men were arrested inside the shop while a third man was caught outside.

The policemen were to appear in magistrate's court later Thursday.

Kinnaird New President Of B.C. Labor Fed

By MIKE HUGHES
Time Staff

The 45 year-old past president of the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council defeated Bob Donnelly by a vote of 626 to 472.

Donnelly, president of the Telecommunications Workers Union, was the candidate put forward by the outgoing executive.

Kinnaird's victory appears to signal a change in the federation's style of union leadership.

During this week's federation convention, Donnelly supporters said they felt the B.C. trade union movement won all its battles with militant industrial and political action and that style should be continued.

Donnelly characterized the Kinnaird group as one seeking a new style for the federation in order to provide a better public relations image for the 250,000 member federation.

But Kinnaird's position was that the difference between the old executive and what he had to offer was not a question of militancy.

Suicide City. . . 8 Dead This Year

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian band reserve has become the subject of a grim joke: Indians and non-Indians are referring to it as Suicide City.

Band leaders and reserve residents are shocked and dismayed by a staggering increase in the suicide rate of young Indians.

Band manager Ernie Elliott said today there have been eight suicides this year — six in the past month and a half.

There have also been 14 attempted suicides.

And three of the suicides have occurred in one family.

Nearly all the victims have been in their teens or early twenties.

Most have died by hanging or shooting.

Elliott said the wave of deaths has stunned the 1,700-member band, residents of B.C.'s largest Indian reserve.

"We don't know why this has happened. We haven't been able to find any answers yet," Elliott said.

Duncan RCMP Sgt. Len Doyle said today an investigation into the problem is being carried out by the federal department of health and welfare, RCMP and the Duncan coroner's office.

But Doyle said he does not feel the problem in Duncan is greater than in any other part of Canada.

He noted that since Jan. 1 this year there have been 11 suicides and 23 attempts at suicides involving non-native residents of the area.

Coroner Tom Lines can offer no explanation for the high suicide rate and deputy coroner, Dr. J.J. Wilson, doubts the suicide wave can be linked to any one single problem.

"It is recognized that one suicide will trigger others in a community on occasion," Wilson said.

"I don't know if anyone can bring it under control. Suicide is a very individual decision."

Elliott said he feels the problems can be attributed to numerous deficiencies such as a lack of housing, jobs and recreational facilities.

He noted the unemployment rate on the reserve is currently running at about 85 per cent and only about 10 per cent of applications for new housing are approved due to lack of funds.

Recreational facilities on the reserve include only four soccer pitches and a couple of basketball courts.

Elliott said a number of young people are depressed and turn to alcohol.

Grey Cup Invades TV Screen

Coverage of Grey Cup events in Toronto pre-empts most daytime programming this weekend on CBC and CTV. Here is the lineup for the two days:

Saturday

Golden Years (8 a.m. CTV) is a retrospective look at highlights from 40 years of Grey Cup games.

The Grey Cup Parade (10 a.m. CBC, CTV), with some 30 floats, 20 marching bands, majorettes, clowns and antique cars, is based on the theme "Travel Canada." Don Harron and Catherine McKinnon are the honorary parade marshals, and reporting the event will be Jenny Meldrum, Ted Reynolds and Al Waxman (CBC); and Helen Hutchinson and Lloyd Robertson (CTV).

Grey Cup Replay: The 70s (12 noon, CBC), with host Tom McKee, recalls key plays in games from the last eight years, including Ian Sunter's last-minute field goal during Hamilton's 1972 win over Saskatchewan, and Tony Gabriel's game-winning reception for Ottawa in 1976.

SUNDAY

Pre-game telecasts (8:30 a.m. CBC, CTV) highlight the events of the past week, including the Miss Grey Cup Pageant, the Schenley Awards presentations to the most valuable players, and a review of the CFL season. Athletes and coaches also offer their game forecasts.

The 1978 game (10 a.m. CBC, CTV) gets underway before an expected crowd of 55,000 at Exhibition Stadium. Coverage of the game will be split by the two networks: CTV's Pat Marsden, Frank Rigney, Bill Stephenson and Mike Wadsworth will call the play until halt time; CBC's Don Chevrier, Russ Jackson, Tom McKee and Don Wittman will take over for the rest of the telecast.

Webster Makes It

Jack Webster's weekday program on BCTV has attracted the largest audience ever to watch a morning show in British Columbia.

BCTV said Webster's first program on October 2 attracted more than 120,000 viewers. The average daily audience over the program's first week on the air was 84,000.

Bill Elliott, vice president British Columbia Television said the program has been extended from its original hour-long format to 90 minutes due to the early success.

"We had originally intended to go to 90 minutes in January," Elliott said, "but when we saw the consistence and high quality of the show, we decided to make the move sooner."

James Michener Tours Poland

A cultural history of an embattled nation will be featured Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 9 and Wednesday at 10 p.m. also on Channel 9.

In his first documentary of the season, host James Michener tours Poland to explore "its vitality and, most of all, its spirit (Poland's) story," he says, "is the story of survival."

As Michener tells it. "From the Scandinavians and the Germans to the various Russian groups to the Austro-Hungarians, Poland has been picked at, punctured and geopolitically destroyed." Location footage, historical paintings and newsreels chronicle this 900-year invasion saga, whose latest entry was the Communist takeover of the 1940s.

But the final chapter in Poland's survival story has yet to be written. In interviews with students and in scenes of farm life, Michener finds "a degree of open defiance rare in the Communist bloc." And from a conversation with then-Karol Cardinal Wojtyla (now Pope John Paul II), Michener concludes that "the Catholic Church has a strong hold on the national spirit despite the government's basic antagonism."

BARBARA WALTERS (l) visits King Hussein and his American-born wife, Queen Noor, in Jordan when the ABC Television Network presents the season's first airing of The Barbara Walters Special, Wednesday, Nov. 29 at 10 p.m. on Channel 4.

Gymnasts Featured

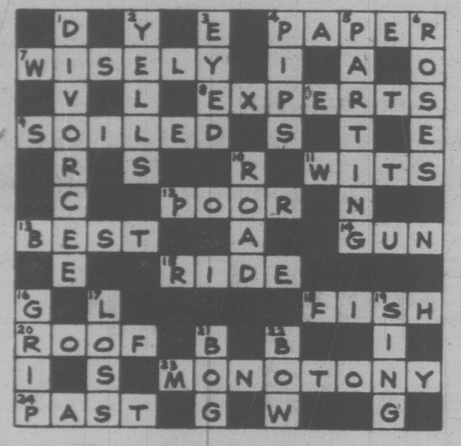
Men's competitions from the Coca-Cola International Gymnastics Competition in Toronto and the Rothmans East-West Challenge Cup equestrian event from Toronto's Royal Winter Fair will be featured Saturday, Nov. 25, at 4 p.m. on Channel 8.

The competition for the Ontario Cup has attracted some of the best gymnasts in the world, with competitors expected from the United States, U.S.S.R., Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, East Germany, West Germany, Brazil, the United Kingdom and Canada.

Canada will be represented by two male gymnasts in each of the floor exercise, pommel horse, rings, vaulting, parallel bars and high bar events. The Canadian team includes Philip Delesalle of Victoria, the Canadian Senior National Champion, and Warren Long.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

4. PAPER not piper. The idea of "coming across" one, links up more naturally with something passive or inert that may simply be found (e.g., a PAPER). A piper seizes the attention rather.
7. WISELY not widely. A benefit applied to all humanity is used universally rather than merely "widely."
9. SOILED not boiled. "Things," in a vague sense, are "generally" apt to get SOILED rather than boiled. Also, when boiled, they are usually altered more fundamentally than merely in how they "look."
12. POOR not boor. The phrase "it's no crime" has a sympathetic note, favoring POOR rather than boor. Also, being a boor is not particularly unpleasant for the boor, at least!
13. BEST not rest. The justifying note of the clue's phrase "it's only reasonable" is called for more in the case of BEST.
14. GUN not gin. It would be a question of a case of gin, rather than of gin being presented "in a case" (as if it would be formally more presentable thus, as a GUN may well be).
15. RIDE not hide. Logically, the bandits would find most deserts barren places to hide. But RIDE would be quite fitting.
18. FISH not wish. As the clue implies, it is possible to FISH productively. Wishing, in itself, never produced anything.
20. ROOF not room. It is unnatural to relate the state of one room to "the timbers of the house," broadly. As a major part of the structure, ROOF is more reasonably apt.
23. MONOTONY not monotone. Aptly, MONOTONY relates to the overall effect of "a person reading" in the manner suggested; the monotone simply is the dull flat voice in question.
24. PAST not post. His "interesting post" may be interesting only to him; in any case, it is rather from his PAST that he would draw may fund of anecdote, etc.

CLUES DOWN

1. DIVORCEE not divorced. The clue is put in the singular and relates better to the DIVORCEE ("the divorced" being people).
2. YELLS not bells. Bells simply are, or are not, understood to be alarms; it's hardly a question of their being "pretty alarming" in their own nature.
3. EYED not dyed. the phrase: "can hardly fail" is better related to an attempt (e.g., to attract attention), favoring EYED. in the other case, "can hardly be other than dyed" would be better usage.
5 PARTING not parking. PARTING, as the clue hints is something one might prefer to do somewhere private. Also, the suggestion that people can choose to do this in a busy public place favors PARTING, since parking may well be very difficult.
10. ROAD not load. A "certain" ROAD may be suitable only for certain vehicles. Whether or not a vehicle takes a load at all depends very much on what kind of vehicle it is.
21. BOG not fog or log. The idea of "bitter regret" suggests chagrin over error, etc.; however, getting into a fog is hardly the driver's fault. A BOG measures up more fittingly than a log (or dog or hog) as something disastrous to have "run into."

Mrs. V. Sales writes from Toronto to enquire about "a fine old Bell parlour organ, very ornate, in perfect working order . . . should be of great interest to a collector".

This is a popular question and the answer is always disappointing. An organ must be regarded either as a musical instrument or a piece of furniture; one can hardly imagine anyone actually collecting them. Modern electronic organs can do everything an old reed organ can do plus a thousand other things. As a musical instrument, therefore, it is of little interest. As a piece of furniture it is purely a matter of decor. Size is important — the bigger they are, the harder to dispose of. Ornateness helps but perfection of condition and finish rates higher.

Old parlour organs usually sell in the $200-$300 bracket, if they can be sold at all. I discussed this with my local musical instrument dealer and he said he could get me a very good price on a dozen. He always has one in the store as a conversation piece. It generates a great deal of interest but rarely a sale.

S.H. Bourne of Coaldale, Alta., solves the mystery of the missing serial number on dollar bills. Apparently the heavy duty detergents used in commercial laundries to wash mechanic's overalls takes out the number as clean as a whistle. They are of no particular value.

Dennis Wilson of Newbury, Ont., N0L 1Z0, says "I have an unusual hobby of collecting crested hockey pucks including one for the Allan Cup, Chatham Maroons, 1959-60. I realize that these pucks are worthless but I find it interesting and would be delighted to hear if there are any other collectors".

I am always happy to publicize unusual collectibles and I am sure Mr. Wilson will hear from others bitten by the same bug. As for hockey pucks being "worthless", most collectibles are that except when interest, rarity, knowledge and publicity are added to them. Mr. Wilson also owns an antique Pepsi Cola oval tray which is presumably 'worth' some hundreds of dollars. In fact it is worth no more than a hockey puck — except to the Pepsi collectible fans.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Please tell me what happened to "Grizzly Adams" on NBC? It was a wholesome family show that was a favorite at our house. Will it be shown later this season? — S. F. Walworth, Wis.

A. NBC, which ran a poor third in the annual network rating derby last season, made wholesale changes in its line-up this past spring in an effort to strengthen its rating position for the current 1978-79 season. As a result, "Grizzly Adams" was one of eight shows cancelled by the network. Others included "The Bionic Woman," "Police Woman," "Black Sheep Squadron," "James at 16," "Quark," "CPO Sharkey" and "What Really Happened to the Class of '65?" It's extremely remote that any of these shows will be brought back to NBC or the other networks.

Q. What ever happened to Donna Reed, who was so popular during the 1960s but seems to have dropped from sight? Did she quit acting or did she die? — A.B., Lawton, Oklahoma

A. Donna Reed, who was the star of her own television series "The Donna Reed Show" between 1957 and 1966, has been in semi-retirement, confining her acting to occasional stage performances in California. She has repeatedly refused offers to return to television, principally because of the quality of the scripts. However, after a 12-year absence from the tube, she has found the right script and is currently filming a four-hour miniseries called "The Best Place to Be" for showing sometime this season on NBC. She plays a recently widowed woman forced to find work to support her family.

Q. Would it be possible to obtain the address of Randolph Mantooth, who plays John Gage in "Emergency One?" — J.L., Washington, Penn.

A. I suggest you write him in care of Universal Television, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q. How about settling what has become a major family argument over the longest running dramatic series on television. We're split on a number of possibilities, so can you help? — D.O., Sun City, Ariz.

A. The longest dramatic series ever on television was "Gunsmoke," which ran for 20 years. "Bonanza" ranks second with 13 years, followed by "Hawaii Five-O," currently in its 11th year.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, c/o Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

A Golden Pledge To Ann-Margret

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — If Ann-Margaret is ever desperate for a job, she can always get one with the famous Radio City Rockettes, and she has a token to prove it.

After she made a two-hour television special with the girls, to air Dec. 14 as an NBC "Big Event," they made here an official Rockette and gave her a gold disc which is their pledge that she'll always be welcome in their high-stepping line.

"Whenever a Rockette retires, she's given a disc like this," Ann-Margaret says proudly. "I'm the only person other than a real Rockette who's ever been given one."

Ann hopes the special, called "Rockette — A Holiday Tribute to the Radio City Music Hall," will rally public enthusiasm for the famous old hall which was almost closed last April and is still existing precariously.

For it figures in two of her most sentimentally held memories.

"When my mother and I got off the boat in New York, we couldn't speak a word of English," Swedish-born Annie remembers, "but either our first or second night there my father took us to the Radio City Music Hall. And I loved it!

"Then the premiere for 'Bye, Bye, Birdie' was held at the Music Hall, and of course, I'll always remember that."

While her December special will remind the public of how well this multiple-gifted lady can sing and dance, Ann's new picture, "MAGIC," will remind audiences that she's a first-rate dramatic actress who's won two Golden Globes awards and two Oscar nominations.

She worked in the picture without makeup and without the help of a hair stylist, portraying an unhappy wife who, as Ann understood her, "had no desire to get herself together."

All of her pictures are important to Ann, but this one is especially so, for her part was written specifically for her.

"Three years ago," she tells, "I met Wlliam Goldman at a dinner party in Paris, and we found that we'd gone to rival high schools in Illinois.

"After our meeting that night, he wrote 'MAGIC' with me in mind. That's very flattering. The character even has a name like mine, Peggy-Ann.

"It's hard to categorize the picture, because it starts as a love story, but then people begin getting killed."

Having just finished playing an unhappy woman, Annie was asked whether she believes most people are happy.

"I try not to analyze happy," she decided. "Because what is happy? If you analyze happiness, then you don't have it."

New Life on Our Days As Sly Steph Steps Out

By John N. Goudas and Steven Scheuer

Stephanie Woodruff, Linda Anderson's protege on "Days of Our Lives," is a puzzlement. Resembling the late Brooke Hamilton (according to David who ought to know), Stephanie dreams of Brooke's car accident. Then she goes to Brooke's grave, and visits Brooke's mother Adele Hamilton, referring to Adele as Mother. At the same time, Stephanie vows to make Bob Anderson pay for his neglect of Mother.

Is Stephanie really Brooke's lookalike sister? Apparently further clues to Stephanie's identity will come later.

Chicago's Eileen Barnett cast this summer as Stephanie won't tell. Steph has a good thing going, why spoil it? Best of all, Stephanie is playing a prominent part this fall on the show. She's into everything . . . David has urges for her and Chris tries to treat the lady as a mere business associate, but Steph always manages to be in his arms when jealous Mary walks in to suspect the worst.

The bright young lady is a calculator. She butters up Linda who is running the show at Anderson Manufacturing Company now that Bob has heart problems, and she may be clever enough to manipulate Linda in the long run. Clearly she is up to no good, a villain making the most of her appealing exterior. Of the newcomers on the soap, the character of Steph displays the most promise.

If Steph bursts into song next at Doug's Place, don't be surprised. Eileen Barnett has the pipes. After one week in New York, following stock work in Chicago, and roles at the University of Iowa, Eileen landed a job as the pit singer for the Broadway musical, "Company."

She's done it all — a year in Las Vegas, as the lead singer for "Hallelujah Hollywood," and then a crack at Hollywood playing in local musicals, plus guests spots on "Happy Days" and "The San Pedro Beach Bums." A short stint on "The Young and the Restless" followed.

"Days of Our Lives" is Eileen's breakthrough show. "Days" should put the final touches on her seasoning. Eileen makes it look easy as conniving, calculating, puzzling Steph.

PLOT PORTENTS. Will Linda continue her affair with Neil now that Bob Anderson has come home on "Days of Our Lives?" Mary knows about the affair yet she must bide her time. Robert appears to be making headway with Theresa, although he's afraid of being rejected again. Steve admits he has no interest in Theresa, he seeks bigger game — ladies with fat bank accounts.

With Thanksgiving over, will Lance ask Vanessa to move out of the house in deference to Lorie on "The Young and the Restless?" Vanessa will turn into a tiger if this occurs. Hard-working, decent Liz contemplates marriage to Stuart Brooks. Keep your fingers crossed, the lady may get a break with the witers this time. As for Kay Chancellor, her legs are improving, and she continues to hide the fact, certain she will lose Derek, if the true nature of her health becomes known.

On "Edge of Night," April, who is having a big problem adjusting to prison life, has another of her famous premonitions, which appears to come true.

Faith and Tom are near death when they're found on a mountain road in "Ryan's Hope." There's also trouble in Ireland and Maeve gets the word that her dear old mother is dying.

Tina receives a third threatening note in "One Life to Live" and it looks as if Vicky Riley's other self, Nikki Smith, is ready to return to Llanview.

Bungalow Sports Great Rear View

The garden-fronted, deeply-shaded entrance of this three-bedroom bungalow sets the tone for this multi-convenience home. The fieldstone veneer, horizontal siding, brick chimney and heavily shaded roof of the exterior extend the tone of tasteful and dramatic elegance and make the design seem completely natural and unpretentious.

The large reception foyer leads forward down two risers to the sunken living room, which features a wide cantilevered fireplace and sliding glass doors to a large two-levelled patio. Up two risers to the formal dining room, which also gives onto the rear patio vial sliding glass doors, and which separates from the large family room-nook combination via convenient pocket door.

An extended galley-style kitchen flows naturally into the breakfast nook and large family room. This latter has a second fireplace and sliding glass doors to the patio for those casual family meals in fine weather. This first level of the patio has a convenient barbecue built into the central fireplace.

To the front the kitchen connects to a large service cmplex via picket door. This complex contains the laundry/utility room, mud room, extensive closet storage and a two-piece vanity bath.

The large two-car garage also contains an enclosed storage area and abundant room for the installation of a large workshop for the maintenance-minded handyman.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

I opened Peter C. Newman's Bronfman Dynasty with misgivings. The book has been ballyhooed to bits, for one thing. The element of surprise, or mystery, or whatever it is that tempts one to explore a promising new book for oneself, was dissipated long ago.

Then, too, I had trouble getting a review copy of the book. McClelland and Stewart's current promotion policy seems to be to saturate the Toronto media and ignore everyone else. (Pound wise and penny foolish, you might say.) Reviewers outside the Big Apple of Canada — and there are plenty of us — are ignored. No wonder the great unwashed tends to think of Toronto as the Big Sour Grape. I finally decided to borrow a copy (we reviewers are a spoiled and mingy lot) from a sympathetic local bookstore which was, of course selling the darned things hand over fist.

I promised to return the book in four days and try not to breathe on it. As this particular store is selling Bronfman Dynasty at a healthy discount off the inflated list price of $17.95, the eventual purchaser of "my" copy has naught to fear. He'll get a barely-used book at a bargain price with a set of invisible fingerprints thrown in.

After all that, you won't be surprised to learn that getting hold of Newman's book turned out to be the best part. Actually reading it was frequently a chore, owing to the author's infatuation with trivia and constant use of long and distracting footnotes. At one point I toyed with the idea of reading the footnotes and ignoring the text, or vice versa, but there's no help for it; one must read the book as Newman wrote it, in a kind of snakes-and-ladders exercise of the mind and eye.

Peter C. Newman is Canada's best known power groupie. Except for Flame of Power (1959, subtitled "Ultimate Profiles of Canada's Greatest Businessmen"), his earlier books were about politics. (Renegade in Power, The Distemper of Our Times, Home Country.) With The Canadian Establisment (1975), however, Newman demonstrated his recognition that the real sources of power of Canada lie beyond our politicians, in the boardrooms of the rich and privileged. The step to this history of the Bronfman dynasty, whose multi-national empire has seven billion dollars worth of assets under its control, was as inevitable as it is depressing.

Maybe other readers will thrill to Newman's disclosures of what goes on behind the facades of the super-rich. One thing is sure: thrill-seekers who read this book will need staying power. Bronfman Dynasty contains more detailed data about mergers, deals and company histories than anyone outside the Department of National Revenue could possibly want to know.

Dotted in between, like raisins in a dry bran muffin, are the gossipy bits. Here Newman's flair for description takes on a sort of desperate lunacy, as if to compensate for the dullness of much that has gone before. "Charles is the most appealing of the Bronfmans," he will write. "His sweet-brown eyes reflect that quality of living at a distance from the centre of things sometimes possessed by blind folk singers, gaitered Anglican bishops, and pet reindeer."

The plain fact is, nobody, not even Peter C. Newman, can out-Berton Pierre. Newman's reporter's instincts, attention to detail and evident enjoyment of his work are all going for him in this book, but they are not enough to save it. Not, that is, unless the reader happens to find the Bronfmans as interesting as Newman so obviously does himself.

Arthur Koestler

'Trying to heal our fatal split'

Is Mankind a 'Mistake'?

By JULIAN REID

Man's a kind of missing link
fondly thinking
he can think.

Of all the dozens of wondrously witty "grooks" that the Danish poet-philosopher Piet Hein has given us, that one ranks high among my favorites — if only because it so sharply punctures our overweening pretensions as a species. It could also serve as the perfect epigram to Arthur Koestler's Janus: A Summing Up.

For Koestler's starting-point in this challenging book is the discomforting thesis that something went seriously wrong in the course of human evolution, so that a fundamental flaw comes built into our inherited brain-structure. "The neural pathways connecting neocortex with the archaic structures of the mid-brain are apparently inadequate," he argues. "Instead of transforming old brain into new, evolution superimposed a new superior structure on an old one with partly overlapping functions, and without providing the new brain with a clear-cut power of control over the old."

As a result, he claims, humanity from its Stone Age beginnings has been afflicted with a "chronic, quasi-schizophrenic split between reason and emotion." Over and over again, our best intentions and our highest achievements end up being undermined and sabotaged by the subhuman brute who lurks within all of us. Looking unsentimentally backwards at the sorry pageant of human follies, Koestler is moved to speculate on the daunting possibility "that homo sapiens is a victim of one of evolution's countless mistakes," doomed ultimately to go the way of the dodo or the Irish elk.

Quite understandably, this pessimistic thesis has drawn considerable fire since 1967, when the author first broached it in the pages of his illuminating study of the human psyche, The Ghost in the Machine. Like all exercises in the "anatomy is destiny" mould, it is seriously questionable on scientific grounds as well as on ethical ones, and the evidence he cites to support it are at best far from conclusive.

Moreover, Koestler's proffered prescription for healing this inbred "schizophysiology," by creating some synthetic chemical capable of "correcting human nature" by restoring the proper balance between our two conflicting sub-brains, rings uncomfortably simplistic, and smacks rather of Brave New World to boot.

Yet however debatable this bold diagnosis of the human situation may be, it remains a powerful modern-age metaphor for our collective predicament — and also, in its own paradoxical way, a key to the very real contribution Koestler is making towards healing the fatal split that mars our beings. For there is indeed a fundamental discontinuity between the rationalistic world-view that predominates today and the deep-down promptings of our animal instincts. And unless this gap is bridged somehow, it seems grossly unlikely that our civilization will succeed in weathering the stormy prospects ahead of it.

Those already acquainted with Koestler's several volumes of autobiography know that his entire adult life has been devoted to a determined struggle to free himself from the fetters of the narrow Marxist ideologism into which he was lured by the naive idealism of his youth. Slowly, painfully, he was led to the realization that his finest instincts had been subtly perverted into the service of a degrading and essentially dehumanizing pseudo-philosophy, all in the magic names of "Reason" and "Humanity."

Ever since, he has been engaged in trying to find a way of reconciling heart and head that will affirm, rather than deny, the full range of unfulfilled human potentials. And while the circumstances of Koestler's life have conspired to make his an unusually dramatic case, it is a quest that should strike a more or less sympathetic chord in all of us.

Over the last quarter-century, in a long series of essays and books, among which The Acts of Creation, The Ghost in the Machine, and The Roots of Coincidence are perhaps the most noteworthy, Koestler has directed his energies to two related tasks. On the one hand, he has attempted to demonstrate that a large proportion of our contemporary problems are either created or sustained by the prevailing philosophy of "nothing-but" reductionist materialism; and on the other, he has set about sketching in the preliminary outlines of a less constricting "holarchic" world-view that accords much better with the cutting-edge of modern science.

Janus, as its subtitle indicates, represents "A Summing Up" of his splendid series of intellectual adventures into the proving-grounds of what may well turn out to be the prevailing wisdom of tomorrow. Those familiar with the earlier volumes will find that it serves as a valuable overall drawing-together and summation, even though it has comparatively little to add to the material presented in its predecessors. And those not yet acquainted with Koestler's stimulating treatments of such important topics as the creative process, the non-Darwinian factors shaping evolution, and the guiding principles of the emerging new "holistic" world-view, should find it more or less of a revelation — even though his concluding discussion of the tantalizing relationships between physics and parapsychology remains, as before, frustratingly inconclusive.

Above all, despite the apparent pessimism of its guiding thesis, Janus stands as an authentically inspiring prevision of what Man may yet become — as much because of as in spite of his divided nature. For what finally emerges from Koestler's stimulating analysis is a renewed awareness of how the two complementary facets of our being are both equal and inseparable parts of the two-faced god-beast that is the human phenomenon.

For whatever inbuilt flaws may characterize his make-up, the human animal remains a unique "missing link" between his evolutionary past and a potential future he is only just beginning to glimpse.

"Only in the case of homo sapiens," as Koestler points out, "has evolution anticipated his needs by a time factor of such magnitude that he is only beginning to utilize some of the unexploited, unexplored potentials of the brain's estimated ten thousand million neurons and their virtually inexhaustible synaptic cross-connections. The history of science, philosophy and art is, from this point of view, the slow process of the mind learning by experience to actualize the brain's potentials. The new frontiers to be conquered are in the convolutions of the cortex."

Saga of a Strange and Enchanting Land

By JACK SCOTT

Patagonia, as forbidding a hunk of real estate as any in the world, more or less perpetually shrouded in mists and myths, is the name given to that desolate wedge at the far-most tip of South America, stretching clear down to Tierra Del Fuego and Cape Horn.

In Buenos Aires, where this reviewer was a resident for a couple of years, it is known simply as "the accursed land". Curiously enough, almost everyone with an ounce of adventure in his soul dreams of discovering it.

This reviewer dreamed, as well. But it was a low priority in the day-to-day events of turbulent Argentina, then passing from a democracy to a military state, as it periodically does. Patagonia was never to be encountered at first hand.

Now, with the publication of Bruce Chatwin's In Patagonia, there's cause for regret that it remained unvisited. Chatwin found not merely a mysterious and strangely enchanting last frontier, but more than enough odd, flamboyant characters and impressions of a savage landscape to make a remarkable, fascinating book. Indeed it may be a small classic of its kind for the simple reason that Patagonia itself is an absorbing study.

In any other hands, perhaps, this would not be true. Chatwin, still in his 30's, a onetime Impressionist expert for Sotheby's of London, later a writer for the Sunday Times, is a born adventurer. He has a sharp eye for the zanier details of society and nature, both being in abundance in that seldom-invaded corner of the world. And he's a magnificent writer to boot.

Beyond a confession that he first went to Patagonia in 1968 because it represented a last outpost where a civilized man might survive a nuclear war, a kind of refuge from the dementia of the world's power struggles, the reader learns little of this eccentric and inspired author. Yet his willingness to endure any discomforts, to be grateful for any awful meal or awful shelter, his footloose wanderings in a land that, itself, is often an impressionist dream, is certainly as compelling as any part of his report.

Two rare abilities make this volume, slim though it may be, something of a masterpiece.

The first is a gift for deep, exhaustive research. A great deal of the historic past of Patagonia is explored. Chatwin goes back to the legendary tales of giants and monsters. He writes of the riotous adventures of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid when they chose that unlikely part of the world as a kind of hide-out. He tells of the coming of the kosher butchers from Israel and the anarchist uprisings in the grim Boer settlements. Seldom, if ever, has the stuff of history seemed so vivid.

Second is his empathy with a cast of characters whose bizarre variety has only one common denominator: a need to find a last refuge of freedom. In Patagonia becomes a kind of saga of rugged, and occasionally lunatic, individualism. A great many of the past and present settlers were in flight from other nations, a collection of multi-national odd-balls, yet each with a dignity and purpose that only a man of Chatwin's calibre could respect.

He writes, for example, of his discovery in a town called Sarmiento, largely populated by inhospitable Boers, of its leading citizen, a Lithuanian named Casimir Slapelic.

"Fifty years ago he found the dinosaur in the barranca," Chatwin notes. "Now, toothless, hairless and in his middle eighties, he was one of the oldest flying pilots in the world. Each morning he put on his white canvas flying-suit, pottered down to the Aero Club in his Moskva and hurled himself and his antique monoplane into the gales . . . the wind had polished his nose and colored it pale lilac. I found him at lunch ladling the borscht into the ivory orb of his head. He had made his room cheerful, in the Baltic way, with flowered curtains, geraniums, diplomas for stunt flying and a signed photograph of Neil Armstrong."

Writes Chatwin: "He wore the kilt and piped at Caledonian Balls. He had one set of pipes sent from Scotland and another he made himself in the long Pategonain winter. In the house there were views of Scotland, photographs of the British Royal Family, and Karsh's picture of Winston Churchill. A tin of Mackintosh's toffee was placed reverently under the Queen."

Near a stream called Rio Pico he came across a Russian woman doctor with artificial limbs, both legs having been amputated at the knees. "She spent every spare peso ordering books from the Y.M.C.A. Press in Paris," he recounts. "Mandelstam, Tsvetayeva, Pasternak, Gumilev, Ahkmatova, Solzhenitsyn — the names rolled off her tongue with the reverberation of a litany."

Such strange encounters are common in Chatwin's altogether wonderful journey. Though the book is unrealistically over-priced — as, it seems, are all imported British books — In Patagonia is required reading for every dreamer.

IN PATAGONIA, by Bruce Chatwin. Clarke, Irwin. $15.50.

'Here is a Poet We Must Read'

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Alexander Hutchison's first book of poems, Deep-Tap Tree, is a remarkable blend of old truth and new sensation that will sound to the heart of any reader with voice to speak.

Hutchison is a Scot, born on the Moray Firth coast (and now living on Vancouver Island), and though he writes occasionally in his native language ("The Rumly Go"), it's in English that his most powerful poems are presented. At his best, as in "The Dead-Carn Shifting Slowly in the Drift," Hutchison combines his Scottish memory with his English voice to give us a rendering of human life that manages to strike the essence of the entire tradition from which springs the best of our poetry — or, for that matter, our civilization.

That tradition, of course, is the Greek, and particularly the oft-forgotten herald of Heraclitus — who, as Hutchison points out in "The Dead-Carn," "pierced flow change and fire"; and so Hutchison's poem brings alive the motion of flood opening the river bank as it breaks "brimming in the firth/Like an opened vein"; and brings to life too the poet's memory of "White Ash, the Bin, Ben Rinnes in calendar/ . . . larch-tassels crimson at shroving/ . . . dust at the door of an earth-house laid."

Thus memory and change, the fixed and unfixed — and thus the human condition irrespective of culture and time. Given that condition, which may not always be a comfortable one, "Man makes a thing to demonstrate inheritance,/Assert the roots . . ."

And so this poem, and every poem.

Hutchison's use of English sometimes recalls the mellifluous sounds of Dylan Thomas, another "foreigner" whose command of the language was often more sure than the native grasp. But where Thomas often degenerated his voice to a self-indulgent, private instrument that carried no immediate sense, Hutchison's poetry is clarity itself. Particularly in those poems with a Scottish setting ("In Brass and in Brimstone I Burn Like a Bell", "Lyke-Wake", "Link-Light", "A Slate Rubbed Smooth", "Traces" and others), the sonority and motion of Hutchison's voice makes memorable music.

Hutchison, however, has studied — both acdemically and poetically — in the United States, and many of the poems in Deep-Tap Tree are sparse evocations of feeling that indicate his interest in the modernist American tradition.

HUTCHISON . . . Scottish memories

They are love poems, most of them, and recount the poet's delight in "Blithe/thundering/looped over stone/lipped/lenity", or "the wonder that begins/one glance from love/to love."

These "American" poems are not, in the end, as satisfying as the "Scottish" poems, primarily because the short, broken line doesn't offer as much room for what one suspects is Hutchison's natural, rambling breath. And the subject matter, too, is one that few poets, unless they be masters, can convey in a manner that transcends the particular. Thus there is an uneveness to this collection that suggests Hutchison is still looking for form to fit his vision and voice. What is obvious, however, is that both are often powerful enough, and their expression often right enough, to tell us that here is a poet we must read.

Incidentally, let us not forget the dog, the lowly dog, as "Mr. Scales Walks His Dog." When Hutchison read this poem here a couple of years ago, he won the house with his insouciant telling of a hound "so old dust flies out from its arse as it runs/ . . . so old its barks hang in the air like old socks."

We've all known dogs like that!

And love, perhaps, and landscape too. A reading of Deep-Tap Tree will refresh your memory of all those experiences and rekindle your present sight.

DEEP-TAP TREE, by Alexander Hutchison. University of Massachusetts Press. $7. Paperback $3.50.

Three Histories Of B.C. Industry

By GEORGE GIBSON

Some people can see romance in truck driving. It has been brought back to public attention by a surge of popular song-writing about strong-armed knights of the highways heading for destinations such as a truck driver's heaven. Those who glance nervously back through the rear-window of the family sedan as they wind through the Fraser Valley have a less kind view of this romance.

If you've got the hammer down on your CB and trucking is your big thing, good buddy, tune in on Andy Craig's 168-page labor of love. He certainly can justify his tape recorder and Canada Council grant.

It's a homey book. Photos from the 30s, 40s and 50s, lifted from family albums and the products of box Brownies give it a flavor that cannot really be duplicated. The first-person narrative that flows in around such fascinating snapshots seems just right.

Now that you're in the mood for yet another glimpse into B.C.'s interesting industrial past, learn about mining in the second of the current triple release from Hancock House. This book is loaded with facts about a vital segment of our economy that has had a struggling existence the past few years.

Geoffrey Taylor's report of the history of Vancouver Island mining is by far the widest-reaching we've seen. The crisp, economical style and photos make it a reference volume of value.

The third book concerns logging, and it's from a different viewpoint than many other such attempts. It appears to be directed more toward the Washington, Idaho and Oregon readers and tells them of the labor strife that has been as much a part of the forestry industry as the logger's axe.

The sections devoted to B.C. have been done better by others but then when one puts the local history alongside the U.S. one, many similarities can be found and perhaps from them lessons can be learned.

Three very interesting books, if only for selected audiences.

TRUCKING: British Columbia's Trucking History, by Andy Craig. Hancock House. $14.95.

MINING: The History of Mining in B.C., by Geoffrey W. Taylor. Hancock House. $17.95.

BIG TIMBER, BIG MEN: A History of Loggers in a New Land, by Carol J. Lind. Hancock House. $14.95.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

A masterful dramatization
Of life in the 'tormented century'

Women historians are fast gaining the ascendancy in a field which, until recently, was an exclusive male domain. That field, for want of a better term, is popular history. While men have become over-specialized by narrowing their vision to a specific period in a particular country, women have ranged far and wide in their search for periods and events which interest them. As men become more and more imprisoned by their previous research, and their books become duller, open-minded women historians are making rings round them.

And in the vanguard is Barbara Tuchman, who has been a household name internationally since the 1962 publication of The Guns of August and whose every book since then has been a publishing event.

In the same way that Cecil Woodham-Smith, another fine woman historian, moved effortlessly from the Crimean War to the potato famine in Ireland, so Barbara Tuchman has swung from modern Europe to China. And for the same reason: an intellectual's curiousity to know the root causes of seemingly straightforward events which inexplicably become major historical disasters.

Male historians usually chart their books in detail before they start, and then search out material to fit and pad out their theses. Women, on the other hand, start with an idea and then see where their research leads them. This is more daring, and the result is usually more exciting, and never more so than in Tuchman's new book, A Distant Mirror.

TUCHMAN . . . her best book

Here's how it works. You start with a thought, in this instance what the effects on remaining society would be following global nuclear war. You then look for an historical parallel, in this instance the most lethal disaster of recorded history — the Black Death of 1348-50, which killed an estimated one third of the population living between India and Iceland.

Tuchman rapidly discovered that the Black Death was only one of seven major disorders of the calamitous 14th century. These were plague, war, taxes, brigandage, bad government, insurrection, and schism in the Church. As all but the plague arose from conditions that existed before the Black Death and continued when the plague was over, it was clear that as the awfulness of the age could not be traced to one cause, all would have to be looked into.

As research took her ever deeper into the violent, tormented, bewildered, suffering and disintegrating Europe of the 14th century, Tuchman realized that she was looking at a reflection in a distant mirror of the disarray of our own times, and that it might cheer us all up to know that men and women had lived through worse before.

So what this distinguished historian offers us in A Distant Mirror is the anatomy of the 14th century with its great rhythms of history and the texture of domestic life as it was lived: what childhood and marriage were like; how money, taxes, and war dominated the lives of serf, noble, and clergy alike.

Apart from the plague, which struck five times during the century, Europe knew the terror of freebooting companies of brigands, the 'hundred years' war' between France and England, which defied all efforts to end it and acquired a life of its own. Europeans also witnessed the crumbling of chivalry under the impact of new weapons, new tactics, and knightly follies.

The over-worked, miserably paid, yet heavily taxed poor were, as ever, the greatest sufferers, and when they rose in a wave of peasant and proletarian revolts the panic-stricken ruling class repressed them with ferocity.

Never at any time had man greater need of sprirtual comfort in a capricious and malevolent world, but there was no comfort to be had because the Christian world was rent by papal schism, with Pope and anti-Pope excommunicating each others' followers and no one knowing whether the one in Rome or the one in Avignon, "each as remote from holiness as it was possible to be," was genuine and therefore all, whether noble, priest, or serf, were damned by one or the other.

The rot and despair gave birth to cults of death and flagellation, but while sparing us none of the horrors, Tuchman delights in showing us that, in extreme counterpoint, there was another side to life. The 14th century was also the time of Chaucer, Petrach, Froissart and Wyclif; courtly romance; ribald tales; the Sorbonne and Oxford and Cambridge; tournaments and pageants; and a richness and gusto to upper class life in total mockery of the ills of the poor.

With the incomparable Tuchman as guide, we savor the full flavor of the century with its satire and humor, sorcery and demonology, lust and sadism on the stage, its passions, loyalties, treacheries, political assassinations, sea battles, sieges, corruption in high places, yearning for reform, and fear of the end of the world.

The players are kings, princes, cardinals, beggars, bailiffs, feminists, incessantly persecuted Jews, university scholars, grocers, bankers, clerks, serfs, sorcerers, mercenaries, saints and mystics, lawyers and tax-collectors, and, dominating them all, the unfeeling valorous knight, the "terrible worm in an iron cocoon."

Such a large and bewildering cast demands a large stage and, to be manageable, a narrow focus, and to achieve this Tuchman has chosen a particular person's life as the vehicle of her narrative. Her choice was Enguerrand de Coucy VII, "the most skilful and experienced of all the knights of France."

Although we don't meet Coucy until the seventh chapter (he wasn't born until 1340), the choice is an isnpired one. Orphaned by his father's death at Crecy and his mother's in the Black Death, Coucy was to distinguish himself in battle, in council, and in diplomacy. Not surprising in one who was loyal to the king of France as well as son-in-law of France's enemy, the king of England, he was the only man fully trusted by nobles and clerics on every side.

We glimpse Coucy only intermittently, like a patch of sky through moving clouds, but he touches every aspect of the century as we follow him through princely feuds and private wars, religious foundations, peace parleys, court life, worker insurrections, secret missions, and to the culminating fiasco of knighthood, the last crusade of medieval Christendom, launched against the Turks who had penetrated Europe in 1397. Coucy died in this last mad hubris of a fabled elite.

As we'e dealing with not only a fabled elite but a fabled time, this might be an appropriate moment to allude to something I have long wished to mention. I have heard it said, by those who use it as an excuse, that recorded history is not worth reading because it is overloaded with the negative. I don't deny that the survival of the bad side — evil, misery, contention and harm — is disproportionate, but if the detractors will kindly glance at today's newspaper they will see that the normal does not make news.

History depends on the documents that survive, and these deal mainly with crisis, calamity, crime and misbehavior, because these are the stuff of documentary evidence — of lawsuits, treaties, moralists' denunciations, literary satire, and papal Bulls. As Barbara Tuchman herself has remarked, "No Pope ever issued a Bull to approve of something."

The 14th century is particularly relevant to our time for it is heavy with parallels, such as an inordinate attention to money and possessions, causing conspicuous consumer consumption in a time of deep trouble; more than usual concern with the flesh; and a display of frenetic gaiety amid a universal sense of unreality and despair.

"History never repeats itself," said Votaire; "man always does." And that's the point of looking in a distant mirror, as Tuchman has done in this superbly written narrative which, as is usual in her work, is liberally spiced with aphorisms ("To admit error and cut losses is rare among individuals, unknown among states."), and uncommon information ("The great merchant cities of Venice and Bruges maintained a regular postal service between them so highly organized that it covered the 700 miles in seven days.")

Simply stated, I believe this book to be Barbara Tuchman's greatest achievement, a masterful synthesis and dramatization of one of the most tormented eras in human history, when the world seemed to be spinning to its doom, but when in fact our modern world was being born.

A Case of Overkill

By HAROLD HOSFORD

When several books on the same subject appear about the same time, comparisons are unavoidable. Such is the case with Darryl Stewart's From the Edge of Extinction, and David Grainger's Animals in Peril, the latest entries in a recent spate of books on endangered animals, and an earlier entry which I reviewed in September, Guy Mountfort's Back From the Brink.

Aside from the apparent similarity of their titles, these books have in common the subject of wildlife conservation and, in particular, with its successes. All also use stories of several kinds of animals to illustrate these successes; and all — more or less — leave their readers with a feeling that, given an even break from man, there is still hope for the wildlife of this planet.

Stewart's From the Edge of Extinction and Grainger's Animals in Peril also share the distinction — in this case dubious — of being Canadian productions; they were written by Canadian artist-naturalists and came out of Canadian publishing houses. Both also manage to overlap their coverage with several species receiving double billing — that is, treatment in both books.

But it is the difference between the two Canadian books and the earlier British production that interests me, and to make my point I must resurrect Mountfort's Back From the Brink — by far the best of the lot.

While Mountfort set his piece on a world-wide stage, Stewart and Grainger stick mostly to North America, this legitimate difference is hardly grounds for criticism. But there is one difference — a profound difference — that sets Mountfort's book apart and relegates Stewart and Grainger to questionable status. That difference is in the effect of the books on their readers. Where Mountfort's is a human, as well as humane, exploration of the ideals and emotions of men and their organizations which demands the emotional involvement of his reader, Stewart and Grainger have produced coldly clinical, almost antiseptic, reports of the events surrounding their subjects.

Grainger fares somewhat better in this respect than Stewart, but neither reveals the eloquence required to capture the imaginations of their readers, nor arouses much more than superficial concern for their subjects.

This is truly unfortunate, because part of the justification for books such as these must be the influence they may have on their reader. I'm afraid neither Animals in Peril nor From the Edge of Extinction will do much to arouse Canadian readers in the battle to save our wildlife.

Come to think of it, the publishers, who apparently believe that in endangered species they've found another goose with golden eggs, deserve some criticism too. In these two books they may have contributed to a bad case of "endangered species overkill" in publishing.

Let me make one last point of criticism: both books seem to be little more than vehicles for the artistic accomplishments of their authors — Stewart with pencil and Grainger with paints and ink. Unfortunately even here they fail to rise much above mediocrity.

Even as sources of information about the animals they discuss, From the Edge of Extinction and Animals in Peril do little more than plow already well-cultivated ground.
